OUT ON THE PLAINS.

WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER.

Have you ever been out on the plains, Jack?
If you haven't just pull up a chair
And be comfortable here while it rains, Jack,
And I'll tell you what happened out there.

Them Injuns is jealous, you know, Jack,
When signs of improvement is showed—
This story I'm tellin' is so, Jack;
If it ain't so, why then I'll be blowed.

My language, it aint highfalutin',
My grammar aint reg'lar; but that's
Not so bad as this sort o' galloutin'
And making up stories for flats.

Some fellers goes out on the prairie,
And when they get home, without fear
Relates them b-g stories, and nary
A one would bear tellin' out here.

So, Jack, just believe what I tell ye
About this here Injun pappoose;
For it aint my intention to sell ye—
A feller that's sound on the goose.

Well, this Injun pappoose is my hero,
And a tough little scallawag; though
Along with old Alex. or Nero,
The brat wouldn't stood any show.

As I told you, them Injuns is jealous
Whenever a white man goes through,
And they all take occasion to tell us
A thing which they don't always do.

When the railroad went through to the ocean,
And us fellers went with it, you know,
Some cussed old red took a notion
To bust up our status in quo.

Your pardon, old boy—I put that in
To show that I once had a head
For learnin'—them words, sir, is Latin;
I once was a scholar, they said.

This Injun pappoose had a mother,†
And she had a mother-in-law;
And it came to pass, somehow or other,
That the railroad offended this squaw.

And so she concocted a scheme, Jack,
To smash up that train without fail;
And, strange as the story may seem, Jack,
She tied that pappoose to the rail.

And the engine came dashing along, Jack,
And the whistle blew loudly and shrill,
But that pappoose was tied on so strong, Jack,
That he stopped that 'air engine dead still.

"Bust that pappoose!" You wait till I'm through, Jack;
It bust the cow-catcher to smash;
But, I'll warrant my story is true, Jack,
That pappoose walked home to his hash.

And he took to the business so well, Jack,
It seems mighty strange, I confess,
But that pappoose, without any sell, Jack,
Tends brakes on the Lightning Express.

ON SILVER WINGS.

BY THE AUTHOR OF "JOYCE DORMER'S" STORY.

CHAPTER XX.

PROPHETIC.

The storm that had visited Linthorp was felt with even greater force at Broadmead. Through the dreary day the rain had beaten against the windows and the wind had swayed the great branches of the almost leafless trees, until they seemed like sylvan arms, outstretched in helpless struggle with the enemy. The oaks were mighty in their years of sturdy growth; but stronger came the raging wind, whose dwelling place man knows not—rushing along upon the wings of death—so it seemed to Diana—shrieking and wailing with a voice that spoke to her of sorrow and decay. "O wind, O wind!—whence comest thou and whither goest thou, and what hast thou to tell to men?"

For, from her earliest years, Diana had invested the wind with an ideal being, with a twofold nature—one that swept by in wrath and destruction; one that came lovingly and kissed the flowers, and brought sweet whisperings of a far off country that spoke of peace and happiness and ever glorious youth.

To night, as she lingered over the fire in her sitting-room, she knew that it came to her in wrath. The beams in the old ceiling creaked and the trees beneath her window cracked, as though some demon's axe were splitting them asunder.

Diana shivered. She had a strong tendency towards a belief in the supernatural. She held fanciful theories that were partly the result of a somewhat morbid childhood and youth. Of a fine imaginative nature, she had lived in an atmosphere of ideal bounds and idealisms of all kinds; possibly the remnants of old legends she had heard in eastern lands, whose brighter picture coloring had died out and left but a shadowy outline. Everything with her was a living power; the wind most of all, since it had a voice whose intonations she had often tried to interpret.

Perhaps there could be heard in it the voices of lost spirits, wailing to those upon the earth and warning those they loved to flee from the wrath to come. To-night, amid the fiercer gusts of wild, fierce passion, she seemed to hear a note that sounded clear above all others—though it was lower, deeper and scarce so despairing in its tone.

And a strange fancy came over her that John Carteret was sending her a message on the storm. Why should it not be, that through the medium of nature, soul should communicate with soul? He might be thinking of her as she was of him; and so the wind had caught up his soul utterances and had borne them to her. Were not all so linked together in this great universe, that it was impossible to say where the chain ended, or what force there was without the range of mortal comprehension that bound the whole with other laws than those we call rational?

She had drawn her easy chair close up to the fireplace, and, wrapping a great cloak around her, she sat, half shuddering as the fresh gusts struck against the casement, making it rattle as though some unseen power were trying to force the windows from their frames. Closer she drew to the fire and placed her hands over her ears to prevent hearing the blast, that sounded to her like unnatural bursts of laughter, as of demons triumphing over the struggling souls of men. Wilder it grew, until she almost felt the breath of unseen revellers on her cheek—cold, piercing. And then the undertone that she had heard before wailed out:—

"Lost! lost!"

She shuddered. Everything was growing strangely real about her. The shadows that flickered in the fire-light assumed fantastic shapes, stretching out long, skinny arms and beckoning to her with misty fingers. The tapping of the rain against the window panes no longer seemed accounted for by natural causes, but rather was the hand of some weird banshee praying for admission. Then came the creaking, signing of the waving trees, the clatter of some loosened tile upon the roof, the sudden flash of lightning and the heavy rolling crash of the thunder—all chiming into the spirit-chorus of the storm, that grew wilder and wilder; and still above it, for ever, sounding in sad, clear tones, Diana heard—

"Lost! lost!"

So real it became at last, that Diana, as though wailing out for help, cried out:—

"John! John!"

For an awful fear had seized her. She had heard of those in their death struggle having the power of communicating with those they loved, through some inexplicable psychological link. Dolly had told her many a story of how a message had mysteriously come, or even the loved one had appeared at the very time of death. And Diana had listened, and had believed; for it suited her nature to believe in the ineffable connection of the soul element throughout creation—the breath of God breathed forth through all and uniting all.

It was longer than usual since Diana had heard from John Carteret, and she had been anxiously pondering over the cause and framing theories as to why he had not written; and now a sudden dread came over her. Surely, if he had been in health, he would not have left her so long without a word of help or comfort. There must be some great reason to prevent his writing to her. Perhaps he was dying—was even dead—and the message had come to prepare her for the tidings.

"John! John!"

And still the storm voice seemed to answer:—

"Lost! lost!"

Louder, again, her cry arose, ringing clear over the raging elements:—

"Joan!"

And at that instant came a mighty crash—louder, it seemed to Diana, than even the rattling thunder—so close, that it seemed as though the roof were breaking in above her. The room rocked and a great cloud of smoke puffed out from the fireplace.

For a moment she was as one paralyzed. Then, gathering the cloak around her, she sprang up and fled downstairs along the passages: she could not be alone any longer.

Jasper had been sitting up late, reading in the library, as was his custom; and the remainder of the household, though they had retired to rest, were not in bed—the storm was too furious for them to sleep through. So the maids had congregated in one of the rooms and the men were sitting listening in the servants' hall, not knowing what might happen.

As Diana raced along the still lighted passages, intending to go to Prime, who slept in the next room to her mistress, Jasper—who, at the crash, had started from his studies—met her.

He was half startled as he caught sight of her—she looked so like a spirit, with her eyes distended with horror and her yellow hair streaming over her shoulders.

"Di!" he exclaimed.

"Oh, Jasper, is it you?"—for she had not, in her terror, perceived him. "I am so frightened," and she crouched up to him. "What is it? Did you hear it?" she asked.

"Poor child, how you are trembling. Of course I heard it. I was going to see what it was."

"Then it was something earthly," said Diana, abstractedly.

"Earthly!—certainly, D[illegible] earthly

"It is the storm," she said, shivering; "it is very awful. What a night it must be at sea!"

Instinctively her thoughts turned to the sea, as though they must be near to where John Carteret was.

She was clinging to Jasper's arm—for it seemed as though she could not be alone.

"Let me go with you, Jasper. It was near my room. I thought the roof was coming in. I can go—only—only—everything is turned round—Jasper——"

The hold upon his arm relaxed; and, if he had not caught her, she would have fallen. He lifted her in his arms and carried her towards his mother's room. She seemed no weight, she was so slight and fragile. Poor Di!—she had grown thinner; and there was a sharpened look in her white, still face, as the light of one of the lamps fell upon it. His heart smote him, and he bent his head and gently touched her forehead with his lips.

"Poor little Di!"

The touch slightly roused her.

"John!" she faintly murmured.

A frown came over Jasper Seaton's brow and his heart grew hard again. The word had steeled him against any compassion for her and silenced any compunction on his part. All pity centred in himself. He carried her rapidly along the long gallery.

"Mother!" he said, "Di is almost frightened to death: she has fainted."

Prime opened the door—her mistress had not dared to be left—and she and Prime were listening in mortal terror to the storm. They had heard the noise above, but were too much alarmed to stir.

Jasper laid Diana on the sofa.

"What was it, Jasper?" asked Mrs. Seaton, her teeth chattering.

"Fright, I suppose," answered Jasper, thinking only of Diana. "Poor child! Here, Prime, have you no salts? She's coming a little to herself."

Diana opened her eyes.

"It will go off now," she said, and her eyes glanced inquiringly round the room, as if she could not quite understand how she had come there.

Just then a loud shriek was heard; and, in another instant, one of the maids rushed frantically into the room.

"The chimney has fallen in, in Miss Diana's bed-room. She's killed!—she's killed!" and Hester's voice was lost in her choking sobs.

At that moment she perceived Diana, who had half risen, looking more like a ghost than a human being; the cloak falling away from her and her white dressing gown flowing round her. The girl believed she had seen her apparition, and, hiding her face, she gave another shriek.

Prime—roused from her fears by the matter of fact solution of the alarm, and by her knowledge of Diana's safety—went up to the girl, and, seizing her arm a little roughly, said:—

"Be quiet with your nonsense. Aren't you ashamed of yourself? Don't you see that Miss Diana's all right and she hadn't gone to bed at all?"

Whereat Hester—who was Dolly's sister, and consequently given to superstitious beliefs, even as Dolly had been—cautiously looked up again, and seeing that Diana had not vanished—as she would have done had she been a ghost—became satisfied and began to cry hysterically.

Prime pushed her out of the room; and Dolly, recovering herself, returned to tell the other servants—who were huddled together, in mute horror, outside the door of Diana's apartments—that Miss Ellis was safe in the mistress' room.

"The Lord be praised!" ejaculated the cook.

"Amen!" responded Thomas, who had been butler in the family for some years, and had seceded from the parish church to the Methodist chapel.

Mrs. Seaton would have given him notice; but Jasper, being lax in his orthodoxy, pleaded Thomas' many virtues in extenuation.

"As long as it makes no difference in his discharging his duties, why need you mind, mother? And you will never miss him at church, as you can't see where the servants sit."

Therefore Mrs. Seaton was induced to become tolerant. If Jasper wished it, the matter was settled. So Thomas' religious liberty was not interfered with and Diana looked upon him rather as a sort of hero and felt that she should like to do the same as long as Dr. Crawford was rector. She had seen the title of Bunyan's book, though she had not read it, and was under the impression that he must have had some such person as Thomas in his mind when he wrote his "Heavenly Footman."

The "Amen!" seemed to rouse the servants from the stupor of fear into which they had been cast, and a simultaneous sobbing ensued. Diana was a favorite with them all—perhaps they scarcely realized how great a one, until death, having passed so near her, had shown them the place she had in their hearts.

"It's right enough for to-night, sir," said Thomas to Jasper. "The old chimney's been a little rickety this long time, but no one would have thought of danger. It's been a narrow escape, according to human speaking; but there's been a mysterious and merciful Providence at work, sir."

Jasper Seaton was not disposed to indulge in meditations of the kind; but a chill ran through him as he thought of the escape Diana had had.

"She shall never sleep up here again," he said to himself.

Hester was already preparing one of the rooms downstairs for Diana.

"It won't do to leave Miss Ellis to-night, Hester," said Jasper, pausing at the door.

"No, sir."

He knocked at his mother's door.

As he came in Diana was saying:—

"I think I shall have Hester to sleep in the room with me. I know it's very foolish, but the storm has made me feel quite ill."

"Prime, you had better see about the room and about Hester," said Mrs. Seaton.

"It is all done," answered Jasper; "and you may all sleep peacefully now, for the storm is blowing over. Good night, mother—good night, Di."

"Good night," replied Diana, wearily.

"Jasper thinks of everything for you, Diana," observed Mrs. Seaton, as her son left the room.

"He is very good to me. I think he must be the best guardian any one ever had."

Prime had returned to the other end of the room and Mrs. Seaton hesitated for a moment whether she should speak the words that were on her lips; but she deemed it wiser to leave them unspoken. So she answered coldly, in a low tone:—

"Do you, indeed! I fancied that you did not appreciate him."

THE LATE T. W. ROBERTSON, DRAMATIST.

"CHILD OF THE AIR."

WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER.

TO M'LLE GERALDINE.

Beautiful Geraldine, child of the Air,
Sylph-like, graceful, daring young queen:
Movements so lovely and form so fair,
A maiden more fearless never was seen.

Flying through space from bar to bar,
And smiling down at the audience below
Happy and cheerful, you always are,
Though dangerous the path you go.

The leap for life on the flying trapeze,
The daring aerial flight through the air,
Down to the stage with the greatest of ease
Comes Little Geraldine, lovely and fair.

May your life be happy and bright—
May flowers 'round your pathway bloom,
And may your heart be ever as light
As the fragrant perfume.

And should you come to our city again
Many friends will welcome you there,
While with music's sweetest strains
They'll crown you, Geraldine, Queen of Air.

THE LATE T. W. ROBERTSON AND HIS PLAYS.

BY W. A. C. F.

Some able, cursory criticisms on his plays, and very feeling tributes to his memory have been elicited by the sunden death, two months ago, of the lamented dramatist, Thomas William Robertson, but beyond a few data obtained from the "Era Almanac of 1868," no important biographical sketch has been published, either in this country or in England, that I have seen—and I have watched the papers closely. The following facts have been gathered for the most part from private, but perfectly reliable sources.

Mr. Robertson was identified with the stage all his life. The novelist might say the green-room was his nursery and the stage his play-ground; for, though he may not have been born in a theatre, he was—there is good authority for stating—reared in its precincts. His father, Mr. William Robertson, played a company for many years on a circuit comprising Nottinghamshire, Lincoln, Huntington, Boston, Cambridge and Stamford. The subject of this sketch was born at Newark-upon-Trent, in Nottinghamshire, on the 9th of January, 1829, and made his appearance on the stage at a very early age. He remained with his father's company some years. I know several actors now in this country who have played with Tom Robertson. Mr. Jamyn Warden, the veteran dramatist, and Mr. Frank B. Conway, have been mentioned among the number. He is represented as having been an awkward, overgrown, unprepossessing fellow, who had no success at all on the stage. From all accounts he must have been a very bad actor. His sister, Miss Madge Robertson, who has recently appeared with much success at several London theatres, has evidently inherited the histrional talents of the family. His father, report saith, possessed considerable ability as an actor, as well as a manager. His mother, nee Miss Matturin, was a favorite. His grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Robertson, were provincial stars of repute. The lady, who was very illiterate, and of whom many anecdotes arising through her ignorance have been told, has been alluded to as "the Siddons of the circuit." Mr. J. Robertson, who recently played Zamiel in the "Black Crook," is a brother of the subject of this sketch.

Mr. Robertson was a "self educated man," as the phrase goes. There is no account of his graduating or even of his attending school. Leading from infancy the nomadic life of a strolling player, his reading was probably confined to the prompt-books. But what a glorious opportunity he had to study men and manners! The mind can be enlightened, too, by keeping the ears well open. But this is a part of his life of which nothing is known.

In 1851, Mr. Robertson wrote an original drama, called "A Night's Adventure," which was produced at the Olympic Theatre when under the management of Mr. Farren. He retired from the stage for the purpose of devoting himself to literature. He made adaptations for the minor and transpontine theatres, and produced "Dublin Boy," "Jocrisse; or, The Showman's Daughter," "Too Late," "Returned to Life," and several such works. He was appointed dramatic critic of the London Illustrated News. In 1861, he wrote a farce for the Strand Theatre, called "Dandy Dan'ab." Farce writing, it may here be said, was not his forte. On the 30th of April, 1864, he brought out "David Garrick" at the Haymarket Theatre, with Mr. Sothern in the title role. This was his first hit, and hence dates his success and reputation as a dramatist.

Behind the scenes all his life, Mr. Robertson possessed a thorough knowledge of the mechanism and facilities of the stage. He understood the stage practically as well as theoretically, else he could never have devised such admirable situations and business. He could set a scene after devising it. He had a trained eye for effect. Entertaining dialogue, such as he wrote, life-like characters, such as he drew, interesting stories, such as he unfolded, are very attractive, no doubt, but his stage business and situations were far more important and influential in the success of his productions. The frame is useless without the picture. Of the two, the picture is certainly the most important. Bouccault's knowledge of the French language has been of great service to him, but it is his skill in construction, his fertility in invention, his appreciation of stage effect, through which he has achieved his reputation. It can be truthfully said of Bouccault that he has improved everything he has adapted, excepting, perhaps, Lester Wallack's "Rosedale," which he transformed into "A Wild Goose." Bouccault is not a great master of the art of dramatic construction than Mr. Robertson was. In the art of literary composition, Mr. Robertson was unquestionably his superior. Their lines of business," to borrow a green-room phrase, were quite different. Bouccault is eminently a sensationalist; Mr. Robertson was quite the contrary. Bouccault possesses wonderful genius for inventing and developing strong, exciting, sensational scenes; Mr. Robertson excelled in delineating what may be called quiet by play (a good phrase by the way), scenes in "every day life"—or in "society" a better expression, I think. I will agree with me that the sensational drama does not faithfully portray the people and the age. Mr. Robertson's comedies are cabinet representations of modern society. The old comedies, which are, alas, seldom seen now, are not better pictures of the days when they were written.

In 1865, Mr. Robertson wrote the libretto of "Constance," for the Covent Garden.

Like other English dramatists of to-day Mr. Robertson followed Bouccault to Paris. "David Garrick" is an adaptation from the French drama, "Sullivan." You have probably heard that absurd story of Garrick's feigning intoxication and conducting himself scandalously at a dinner party for the humane purpose of disgusting and disenchanting a maiden who had become enamored of him while seeing him play Hamlet, and whom at the critical moment he discovered to be one he had long admired and loved. This incident has been woven into an interesting story by a German dramatist, who has been translated by the French author. Mr. Robertson displays great skill in his adaptation. He has evidently taken great pains with the dialogue and it is in his happiest vein.

The comedy of "Society," I am inclined to think, was written before "David Garrick," which was done to "order" for Mr. Sothern. No great ability is displayed in either the conception of the story or its management. It is rather clumsy and crude in many portions. It, nevertheless, is quite entertaining and plays tolerably well. Its success was established in Liverpool before it was produced in London at the Prince of Wales Theatre in 1865. It is an authenticated fact that this comedy was refused by every manager in London before it was accepted by the Liverpool manager, Mr. Alexander Henderson. Successful in Liverpool, it was accepted for London by Miss Wilton. It was Miss Marie Wilton's first venture with Mr. Robertson, and was a good, though not a brilliant, success. Miss Wilton, it is worthy of note, has been very fortunate with Mr. Robertson's productions. The pieces which she has produced have been successful.

Greater skill is displayed in the construction and dialogue of the comedy of "Ours" than in "Society." It was written the year following. The light and shade are not so strong as in "Caste," and it is not as original, either. It satisfies us that the dramatist had not been idle, and marks his progress in his art. The character drawing is good. Hugh Chaicote is a faithful delineation; there are Mary Netleys everywhere; Lady Sheridan is an admirable sketch; so is Sergeant Jones.

Mr. Robertson, who by this time was no longer the "young dramatist" but the "popular dramatist," was tempted by Manager Vining, of the Princess' Theatre, to write a sensational drama. Now, Mr. Robertson did not possess the slightest perception or appreciation of the requirements of the sensational drama. In a word, "it is not in his line," to employ another green room phrase. The most sensational effect in any of his pieces—I mean his successful pieces, his comedies, of course—is the departure of the soldiers at the close of the second act of "Ours;" and here this was worked up to sensational pitch by Manager Wallack. He wrote for Mr. Vining a three act sensational drama, called "Shadow Tree Shaft," which was produced Feb. 6th, 1867. The interest hinges upon the identity of Sir Walter Kenyon, who has been imprisoned for treason and escaped, and of Michael Woodyatt, a Staffordshire miner, who resemble each other closely. The principal effect—though there are several sensational scenes, which have been completely eclipsed by Watts Phillips' play, "The Lost London"—is a partial realization of the legend of "Shadow Tree Shaft," from which the title is derived. A maid, the legend runs, had two lovers. One of them resolved to kill his rival. He killed him and threw him down the shaft. The maiden seized him on the spot, and in the struggle which ensued they both fell. Their spirits haunt a neighboring fir coppice on moonlight nights. The spectres of the men cast long, dismal shadows before them, while the apparition of the maid hovers near like a guardian angel. This is the scene realized. It is inartistically brought about and is not very effective. The plot is contrived and developed with ingenuity and originality, it must be confessed, but the characters, painted with much care, do not seem to be exactly the right persons in the right place; and "Shadow Tree Shaft" is not a good drama, if one can form an opinion without having seen it played. It held the boards only a few weeks, and has never been played since. The character of an itinerant, Sampson by name, is drawn with much power and qualintness.

"A Rapid Thaw" is a free translation of the comedy of "Le Dezel," by the popular French author, Victorien Sardou. It was produced at the St. James' Theatre, March 2d, 1867, Miss Herbert, herself, sustaining the character of Hector de Bassompiere (played, by the way, in Paris by M'lle De Jazet). Hector de Bassompiere, of the royal household, boasts of his indifference to the charms of the fair sex. Henriette de Tronsac is an avowed man-hater. The two are brought together in an amateur theatrical performance before the King. Need it be said now that they fall desperately in love with each other; that there is a rapid thaw in their hearts? Although Mr. Robertson performed his work very creditably, the piece did not please, and was withdrawn at the close of the first week.

"Caste," which was produced at the Prince of Wales Theatre, April 6th, 1867, is Mr. Robertson's chef d' œuvre. It is an inspiration, not a study. The story must be familiar to the reader. It is unique in plan and the action is managed with consummate skill; in it the author has perfected his system of dramatic construction. None but a master of his art could have written and contrived this charming comedy. Not only is a thorough knowledge of the stage displayed, but a knowledge of the heart and its passions. Character is admirably contrasted, though the lights are not so strong that great absurdity is produced by the contrasting them. So natural is the dialogue that Mr. Robertson may be said to have played the reporter. He drew from life! He used his eyes and ears! George D'Alroy, Captain Hawtree, Eccles, Sam, Marquise St. Maur, Polly, Esther, are all admirable full-length portraits.

"For Love," produced at the Holborn Theatre, Oct. 7th, 1867, was another sensational drama by Mr. Robertson, which was a greater failure than "Shadow Tree Shaft." The story, rather far fetched and labored, does not enlist much interest. The "grand" scene is the sinking of a sea of a ship—an incident suggested, it is said, by the loss of the Irrawaddy—but it is not cleverly managed, and is not effective. The character of a negro, Wasshington Cæsar, is sketched with considerable success.

Robertson's next production was the four act drama of "Play," which is one of his weakest efforts, both dialogue and situations being weak. An excuse for the decline perceptible in "Play," and which was asserted in "School," has been found in the fact that it was written hastily; but we suspect the real reason to be as well, or as much, overwork and failing health. "Play" was written hastily, we are told, being called for by Miss Wilton (in consequence of the failure of "How She Loves Him") sooner than was expected. It was produced at the Prince of Wales in 1868, and has been performed in this city at the Fifth Avenue Theatre. During the same year Mr. Robertson adapted a drama, entitled "Passion Flowers," from the French, for his sister, who played in the provinces. He wrote a clever dramatic sketch, entitled, "A Dream in Venice," which Mr. and Mrs. Germon Reed produced at the Gallery of Illustration.

In 1869 Mr. Robertson gave additional evidence of his industry by producing five pieces, all adaptations, to be sure, but containing much original matter. He displayed great ability in adaptation—not merely in successful translation, but in localizing or nationalizing. Three of these adaptations may be mentioned with the German. These were:—"Home," made for Mr. Sothern, whom Mr. Robertson was very successful in fitting, produced at the Haymarket (here at Wallack's); "School," produced at the Prince of Wales' (here at Wallack's), and which, next to "Caste," is Mr. Roberts'n's most popular and successful production; and "Dreams," produced at the Gaiety and here at the Fifth Avenue Theatre. The fourth production of the year was "Progress," an adaptation from a French comedy of German extraction. This was produced at the Globe Theatre and here at Wallack's Theatre. The fifth piece was also obtained from the French, and was a three act drama, called "The Nightingale," which was performed at the Adelphi Theatre. This drama has never been produced in this city, but has been played in Boston.

In 1870, when Mr. Robertson commenced to seriously feel the effects of the malady which removed him from earth—heart disease—he furnished "M. P." to the Prince of Wales', which, since the success of "Society," relied entirely upon him. "Caste" and "School" having each a run of over a hundred nights. I believe this drama has been produced in Boston. He wrote "Birth" this year for Mr. Sothern, who produced it in Glasgow, but not with any success. In these later works, which I have not thought worth while to examine in detail, as I did his earlier and best, the situations are forced and the dialogue hitchy. In the first act of "Birth" is some of the best dialogue Mr. Robertson has written, but there is a painful drag after this.

"War," his last production, and suggested by incidents in the recent French and Prussian struggle, was produced early in January of the present year at the St. James' Theatre, the same night, I believe, on which it was brought out here at Wallack's Theatre. In the quiet walks of comedy Mr. Robertson was thoroughly at home, but, as we have had occasion to observe, he was not at all up to the exigencies of the sensational drama, and this effort in that line was a signal failure, and entirely of his pen. Death held the accomplished dramatist in its grim grasp while the news of the failure of his last work filled his ears.

Mr. Robertson died on the 3d of February last.

He was twice married, and left a wife and two children. The second wife was a German lady, and aided him in his translations. The particulars of his death, with an account of the funeral, has been given in the regular theatrical columns of this paper, and so need not be referred to here, any further than to add that the remains were interred in Abner Park Cemetery, Newington.

The accompanying portrait is one of the best that was made. The expression and pose is excellent.

All through his career as a dramatist, Mr. Robertson continued to be an active contributor to the press, except when precarious health, which in 1868 compelled him to take a trip to Germany, prevented such constant literary application as his ambition, perhaps necessities, inspired. He was a regular contributor to Fun. It cannot be said that now he is dead he is beginning to be appreciated, for he was thoroughly appreciated in his life-time, at least since he rose into prominence, but that the difficulty and doubt of finding his successor is recognized. Mr. Alberry, the author of the "Two Roses" and "The Coquettes," is as full of quiet humor, but he lacks his delicacy of sentiment, keen insight into character and ingenuity.

ALBERT HALL.

ITS FORMAL OPENING.

THE ALBERT HALL, South Kensington, London, Eng., was formally opened by H. M. Queen Victoria, on March 29th.

The building is elliptical in form. The style of the building is Italian renaissance, the materials of the facade being entirely red brick and terra-cotta. On a massive base of brickwork, thirteen feet high, is a plain red brick story, with deeply recessed, square-headed windows. The principal floor has semi-circular headed windows, and is divided into bays by pilasters which support the main entablature, and a balcony having a projection of about four feet from the building. Above the balcony is another plain band of brick work, pierced with occasional doorways, giving access to it from the picture gallery, and above this again is a frieze in mosaic work, surrounding the building in one unbroken sweep; the cornice over the frieze is also of terra-cotta, and deep rather than projecting. This cornice and blocking course terminates the outer wall of the building, but twenty feet back is the main wall which supports the roof, and from being carried up much higher than the wall it appears above it, and has been accordingly faced with red bricks, and enriched with some plain string courses of terra-cotta. The side porches have the same base and principal story as the main building, but the ground floor is panelled up with the great arches over the carriage drive. These buildings are surmounted by pediments, and terminate at the level of the balcony. The ground porch, or Queen's Entrance, has three large arches, with two niches for statues, and one wide, square-headed openings on the principal story. The roof is flat, at the same level as the balcony, affording an excellent view of the Albert Memorial, and, on a clear day, of the park and gardens.

In the interior the hall is oval, 219 feet long and 185 feet broad. Height of hall from floor to centre of ceiling, 135 feet. In the centre there is a level oval space, the arena, 103 feet long and 68 feet wide, intended to be used either for the accommodation of a portion of the audience or for purposes of exhibition. This space seats 1,000 persons. Surrounding the area is the amphitheatre, containing 1,382 seats, in ten rows, rising one above the other. Back of the amphitheatre are eight separate boxes, with seats for 320 persons. Above these rise the boxes of the grand tier, with seats for 400 persons, and above these again the boxes of the second tier, also accommodating 400 persons. Above the upper tier is the balcony, with eight tiers of seats for 1,876 persons. Still above the balcony is another gallery, with two rows of chairs for 2,000 persons. Besides all this, above the orchestra, are two galleries, accommodating 300 persons, so that the hall will comfortably hold and seat no less than seven thousand four hundred and eighty-two spectators, exclusive of the performers. The organ and orchestra are situated at the southern end of the hall, and the space for the orchestra accommodates 1,000 performers. Every seat in the hall was filled, and with the orchestra of 1,000 performers, under the leadership of Sir Michael Costa, there were 8,482 persons present. The organ, as yet unfinished, is of great dimensions. It is 60 feet wide and 70 feet in height. It contains 7,000 pipes, 128 stops, 3 complete, and 4 claviers, and some among its pipes are the largest ever constructed. They are 40 feet in length, 2 feet in diameter, and are composed of an alloy of nine parts of tin with one part of lead. It has four manuals, extending from CC to C in altissimo, and one pedal from CCC to G. The pedal organ consists of 21 stops, the first manual clavier or choir organ, including the echo organ, comprising 20 stops, all the pipes in which are enclosed. The second clavier, or great organ, contains 25 stops, only two of which have wooden pipes in the bass notes. The third clavier, or swell organ, comprises 26 stops, and these are all, with the exception of the basses of two stops, enclosed. The fourth clavier, or solo organ, has 20 stops, making in all 111 stops; then there are 14 couplers and 32 combinations. The pipes range from 32 inches in diameter down to the size of the smallest straw, and from 40 feet in length down to 6 inches. The motive power for this wonderful instrument is obtained from two steam engines situated in the basement adjoining the bellows chamber. The engines were both specially designed for the purpose. The one is a vertical beam engine, of about 10 horse power, for supplying compressed air or atmospheric air, at a pressure 14 lbs. per square inch above or below the pressure of the atmosphere, for working the pneumatic valves. The other is a pair of 15 horse power horizontal non-condensing engines, driving a three throw crank shaft, to work the six pairs of bellows, or "feeders." Three pairs each of these feeders supply the wind at a pressure of 6 oz. per square inch above and below the atmosphere. Nearly all of the boxes in the hall were sold before the opening—not for the day alone, but forever, or rather for 999 years. Those on the grand tier sold for £1,000 each, those on the second tier for £800, and the stalls for £100 each. Her Majesty has two boxes, the Prince of Wales has one, and there is scarcely a nobleman who has not purchased a box or a stall. The space for the masses is only the upper gallery and balcony, but happily the seats there are said to be quite as good for hearing purposes as those below.

The ceremony of the opening was very simple. As the Queen entered the National Anthem was sung. She was conducted by the Prince of Wales to a temporary throne which had been erected at the southern extremity of the arena, in front of the orchestra. The Prince of Wales read an address and the Queen handed him a written address in reply; a prayer was said by the Bishop of London and the Queen then arose and declared that the Hall was opened. The Queen then retired to her private box and the musical performance commenced with a cantata composed by Sir Michael Costa. After this performance a miscellaneous concert of music was given. The principal vocalists—all English—were Mme. Lemmens-Sherrington, Mme. Patey, Mr. Vernon Rigby and Mr. Santley.

KEAN'S "OTHELLO."

WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER.

More than a year since I accidentally encountered an old gentleman who had once seen the elder Keen perform "Othello" at a theatre in Dublin. The following was the description given me, as well as I remember it:—

I did not get to the theatre until the second act was on. Kean's entrance to Desdemona from the ship was the most perfect exhibition of stage effect I ever witnessed. His eager step, outstretched arms and dancing eye were things I shall never see again. His speech to Cassius—"Michael, look you to the guard to-night," had in it the command of the general and the request of a trusting friend. But when he dashed forward and threw up the curtain to go to the affray, his action had something in it like the bounding of a lion into the old Roman circus. How indignation fairly blazed in his eye, as after swiftly and coldly recounting the enormity of the offence his officers had committed, he said:—"Is monstrous!" The reproof to Cassio was exquisitely musical. He walked slowly and majestically up to the fallen lieutenant, observed him attentively as he hung his head in shame, and, as if struggling between the promptings of love and those of duty, and finally, in a low, sweet, sad voice, mellow and tender as a flute, he called to him—"Cassio!" The other, with an effort, looked up. "If love thee—Cassio clasped his hands as if in hope of forgiveness—"but never more be officer of mine!" A wail of anguish broke from the degraded and disappointed soldier; his general quickly turned his face as if to hide his own grief, and went slowly up the stage. The third act was supernatural. Nothing can be imagined so effective as was its alternation of light and shade. All the first speeches were subdued and quiet. Everything about it there reminded me of the calm before a storm. The first electric flash followed the warning of Iago. "My lord, beware of jealousy." Yet even the speech succeeding, "Why, why is this? Think'st thou I'd feed a life of jealousy?" sic was, as he laughed through it, though I must confess there was an undercurrent of uneasiness in his peculiarity perfectly apparent. But when the tempest burst it was appalling. An icy perspiration broke out all over me. When Othello seized Iago by the throat and looked into his eyes, the traitor's face seemed to be scorched by the terrible gaze. He writhed, bold devil as he was, under such fury. My words are absolutely powerless to give the faintest idea of the scene.

The old gentleman who witnessed the above performance lives in Baltimore, and has seen many "Othellos" since; but he says the only one which reminded him in any respect of the power and beauty of Edmund Kean's

NOTICE.

☞ CORRESPONDENTS, advertisers, and all others writing in relation to matters connected with this or any other department of the CLIPPER, are respectfully requested to address their favors to the editor and proprietor, and thereby avoid omissions, mistakes and confusion which are likely to occur when such communications are addressed to our assistants.

NOTICE.

ADVERTISERS must hand in their favors before 6 o'clock on Monday evening, in order to have them appear in that week's issue.

To Correspondents.

G. G., South Bend, Ind.—Any player allowing his name to be presented for election, and being so elected, becomes a bona fide member of the club in which he is elected, and from the date of such election he becomes amenable for dues; and if such dues are not paid he becomes "in arrears for dues," and the rules of the game prohibit any man, being in arrears for dues, from playing in any match game. They had a right to expel you, and unless your dues are paid up you cannot play in a match this season. This is the rule in all associations now in existence.

WEST.—The following are the rules governing the points in question:—"1. If either player plays with his opponent's ball, the stroke is foul; and, if successful, he cannot count, provided the error is discovered before a second shot is made." 2. "Should two or more strokes have been made previous to the discovery, the reckoning cannot be disturbed, and the player may continue his run with the same ball, or he may have the balls changed. The same privilege is extended to the opposing player when his turn comes to play."

NEW YORK.—"A party of five throw dice for wine; the first throws 11, and one of the party bets on beating that number; he throws last and gets 11 likewise. Is that a tie on both events?" No; the party betting loses his wager on beating 11, but he must throw again with the other person who threw 11 to decide who pays for the wine.

FRANK C., Greenville, Pa.—The umpire having called for a "low" ball for the striker, if the pitcher fails to send in such low ball the umpire must call balls in the order of the delivery of every ball not pitched as called for, and at the same time over the home base. If they are pitched "low," as called for, and yet not over the home base, balls must be called.

ALBERT.—At cribbage, cards played in the following order:—4, 3, 1, 2, as you state, there is no count except possibly for last card; if, however, we suppose the two men, a dealer and player, to stand as we see, then the player of said deuce would be entitled to three points, and the player of the last tray to nothing, except one for go or last card, if it was so.

R. C. K.—4. Only Pilgrim and Victory, who had each won a heat, could start for the third, and you will see from our report of the race that only these two horses did actually start. 2. She is neither a Jewess, nor did she ever embrace the Jewish religion. 3. Master Barney was born in Buffalo in 1850.

E. A. LEWIS, Brattleboro, Vt.—1. J. W. Albaugh is to be the manager of the theatre in Montreal, Canada, for the summer season. There is no theatre in Quebec. George Holland is to be the manager in Toronto, Ont. 2. Address Mr. T. A. Brown, at 730 Broadway, this city.

W. N. M., Phila.—The secretary of the Amateur National Association is Mr. Harry W. Mellor, 76 Hillen street, Baltimore. The secretary of the Professional National Association is N. E. Young, Washington, D. C. We do not know the address of the others. The New York State Association is defunct.

P. J., West Meriden, Ct.—The terms of the bet, as stated by you, "that Marshal Jewel will be the next governor," makes it a matter of indifference whether he becomes so by election or by the Legislature; therefore, if chosen either way to act as governor, the party betting as above quoted will win.

JACK LODER.—Miss Agnes Ethel made her first appearance upon the stage as Camille in the play of that name at Jerome's private theatre—now the Casino—on Broadway, October 10th, 1868.

2. Our opinion of her ability as an actress you will find in the past issues of the CLIPPER.

BUCKEYE SPORT.—1. You will have no trouble about that, providing you pay your visit to the ground. 2. The start will not be made from that point, but by being on hand a day or so prior to the fixture you can obtain all necessary information. 3. See answer to "Capt. Klotz."

GAME.—If the position of governor is not decided by the votes of the people, but is transferred to the legislature, then a candidate cannot be strictly considered as elected, but appointed, rather; therefore, in our opinion, a bet that he will be elected is lost.

R., Toronto.—We have not the papers you allude to on file. Mace's height, in his stocking feet, is 5 ft. 8¼ in. Sayers' is given as the same, but as we do not know whether it was taken without his shoes or not, the bet should be drawn.

C. B. FLINDER, Baltimore.—Thank you for copies of the old bills; they shall have early insertion among our "Varieties." The bill announcing the first appearance of Mr. Forrest on the legitimate stage will be published in a month or two.

CONSTANT READER.—1. Yankee Sullivan was born at Bandon, near Cork, Ireland, and was found dead in a cell at San Francisco, Cal., May 21st, 1856. 2. James Nuttall—1min. 55¾secs. 3. Hewitt and Smith ran 300 yards, the latter in 33¼ secs.

M. H., West Concord, N. H.—There are no fixed rules for such business matters, it being simply a question of mutual negotiation, according to demand, merit of story, etc., which can only be settled by direct application to the parties.

G. M. B., Philadelphia.—As a question of right or wrong, it's a matter of indifference, and there is no law to govern it, but the dealer, after dealing, should place the pack on his left hand, so as to be convenient for the elder hand to cut for trump.

MAILING, Toronto, Ont.—Mace's height, in his stocking feet, is 5 feet 8¼ inches; Sayers' has always been given as 5 feet 8½ inches also, but whether he was measured in his stocking feet or not we cannot say.

A. M. S.—1. We believe that the party you refer to deals on the square. We are not in that line of business. 2. At all fours, the point of Jack turned up may be taken at once, and as often as turned.

O. G., Hartford.—It is our opinion that if the question of the Connecticut Governorship goes to the Legislature, that persons betting before the people's election took place the English or Jewell would be elected, loose.

JACK ROBINSON.—We gave extended notices of the "Cardiff" when exhibited here, and therefore must decline to give it a further notice at present.

H. B. M., Fort Shaw, M. T.—A won the money fairly, and the idea of his forfeiting his right thereto by offering to run the race over is ridiculous.

A. B AND C, New York.—C, having connived at the cheating of A, becomes a party to the contemplated fraud, forfeits his claims, and is in reality to the whole money in the pool.

S. C. W., Kingston, N. Y.—Better abandon all idea of going upon the variety stage. There are more performers of reputation already than can secure engagements.

EDGAR CADY, Richfield Springs.—The directors can select players as they choose, and from either nine. The captain has no voice except to suggest. He has no vote.

TROTTER, Chicago.—Richard Allen's fastest time with running mate was 2:18, made in his race against Dexter on the Fashion course, L. I., in July, 1867.

CAPAZA.—1. Hatfield, of the Mutuals. 2. 137 yards. 3. At short field. 4. Do not give our opinion on those matters in correspondents' column. 5. [illegible]

G. M. M., Augusta, Ga.—There are no printed copies of the rules of dog fighting for sale; but you can obtain a manuscript copy by enclosing 50 cents to Ed. James, 88 and 90 Centre street, this city.

HOOK M., Cincinnati.—Wm. T. Sherman holds the rank of General of the army of the United States, his commission dating March 4, 1869, the date President Grant was installed.

X. Y.—The wording of the bet is not that A could solve the problem, but that he could tell the number not used in the combination, and when he guesses correctly he wins.

L. P.—Jim Mace, Ben Sexton and J. Brighton, who were respectively pugilistic, skittle and pedestrian champions of England at the same time, and were born in the same street.

NEWSBOY, Baltimore, Md.—1. About fours, in case of a tie, the point for game is taken by the non-dealer. 2. At auction pitch, in case of a tie, the point is not taken.

R. M. S., Boston.—1. Theodore F. Randolph, the present Governor of New Jersey, and Marcus L. Ward, his predecessor, were both republican candidates. 2. Mayo is the larger of the two.

ASHUBNUS, Ottumwa, Iowa.—Mrs. Hoey, Mrs. Harry Watkins (Rosina Shaw,) and Miss Maude Shaw are sisters. Miss Dora Shaw is not a relative, being of a different family.

HENRY CARROLL, St. Louis, Mo.—A letter addressed to the lady in care of this office will reach her. We do not answer questions by mail.

G. W. S., Charleston, S. C.—You misunderstand what we desire. We only expect you to write concerning such amusements as actually take place in your city.

C. T., New Bedford, Mass.—Better abandon all idea of going upon the stage, and heed your parents' desires. There are more performers now than can get employment.

W. S. HIPP, Baltimore.—1. R. Charles Hotel, corner of Bleecker street and Broadway. 2. One is due on April 26th and the next on May 10th.

JAMES B. GOGGIN.—Mr. and Mrs. Charles Kean played an engagement at the Broadway Theatre, commencing August 29th, 1865, and ending Sept. 23d in that year.

STAR.—Because others had their dues paid for them, that did not absolve you from your liability, and therefore if you get in arrears you are liable to expulsion.

FRANK, Kalamazoo, Mich.—There was such a firm, but they recently sold out to other parties.

A. H. M., Oswego, N. Y.—The Woodroffe Troupe of Glass Blowers are still in Australia.

H. R., Boston.—Three trays and two sixes beat three deuces and two aces.

SUBSCRIBER, Washington.—A heat won by a horse that does not win the race goes on for a second time bar against the horse.

W. H.—The game is a tie; no score being counted until the cards are all played.

HONOLULU, New York.—The two parties who each threw 45 take the first and second prizes, throwing off for the choice.

CUBAN CITY, Milwaukee.—Three fives and two aces beat three fives and two fours.

I. F. B., Troy.—We shall probably get the reports from other sources.

A FRIEND OF THE PROFESSION, Philadelphia.—Should have attached his proper address to the communication.

CONSTANT READER.—Joe Goss hails from Wolverhampton, Northamptonshire, Eng.

J. G. B., Newport, O.—1. We do, when they are good enough. 2. Yes, if they suit.

B. F. G., Carthage, Mo.—1. The fastest running time, even mile, is 1:43¾, by Judge Curtis. 2. No.

CONSTANT READER.—C, having but one to go, and making high, went out first, because the point for high is the first to be taken.

F. G., Memphis.—Judge Curtis' time of 1:43¾ is the fastest even mile on record.

INQUIRER, Philadelphia.—1. A level road. 2. A horse. 3. We do not know the address of James Myers.

D. S. R., Davenport.—It was in his fight with Morrissey that Heenan's hand was injured by coming in contact with a stake.

W. Y. K.—1. Yes. 2. The quickest time in which a mile has been walked is 6min. 42sec., by Rowell.

L. H., Jr., Philadelphia.—Address John Taylor, Taylor's restaurant, West and Desbrosses street, New York.

IRMA, Baltimore, Md.—Send to Ed. James' purchasing bureau, Nos. 88 and 90 Centre street.

W. E. C., Cincinnati, O.—Lady Don is the manageress of the Theatre Royal, Nottingham, Eng.

J. E. F., Toronto, Ont.—1. We have no intelligence of him. 2. We do not answer questions by mail.

SUMCHUMS, Ironton.—A chicken becomes a stag or cock when he is twelve months old.

DICK.—Apply to the secretary of the association. Better join the National Association of Juniors.

T. F. M.—1. Same as last year—Green Stockings. 2. Early in May.

W. F. B.—The quickest time in which a mile has been walked is 6min. 42secs.

S. B. B. C., Hackensack.—1. Thirty seconds. 2. Three fives and a Jack, with a five turned up of the same suit as the Jack. 3. Yes.

H. B., Hermansport, Iowa.—Sammy Shaw's celebrated dog Jacko killed 100 rats in 5 min. 28 sec., in England—the best on record.

G. J. M., Chicago.—We have no means of obtaining the desired information.

CONSTANT READER, Corry.—Mention distance and whether by man or horse.

FRED, Springfield, Mass.—We never heard of the party mentioned. Perhaps you mean Dan or George.

G. G. H., Philadelphia.—Under such circumstances there is no alternative but to give, or deal again.

QUINCY.—Twelve points for sequences, four for pairs and one for his nob; or, sequences in all.

L. M. C., Detroit, Mich.—You can discontinue your letters in the future.

J. E. S., Port Jervis.—Write to Ed. James, 88 and 90 Centre street, this city.

W. H. M.—George Carey weighed 155 lbs., when he fought Gallagher.

CONSTANT READER, Holyoke.—The best recorded standing jump, level ground, is 13 ft. 5¾ in., by Ed Searles, at Utica, N. Y.

BRYAN H., Scranton.—Send on a deposit if you wish your challenge inserted.

H. AND W., Chicago.—All bets must be paid as the battle money, after a fight, is awarded.

MATT SMITH, Bloomington.—1. Don't know where he is at present. 2. Yes; see advertisement in another column.

DELAWARE CHICKEN.—Peter Reardon stood 5 feet 7 inches in his stocking feet, according to his own statement.

HONESTLY.—Hoffman was credited with more than 33,000 majority, consequently you were the winner of the bet.

J. F. K.—1. Daniel Webster died Oct. 25th, 1852. 2. He was once nominated for president by the Whigs.

J. L., Toledo, O.—A seven, three trays and a deuce, at cribbage, count twelve points—six for fifteens and six for pair royal.

A READER.—At euchre, no player can play alone but the one who assumes the responsibility of the trump.

GRATITUDE.—Mr. Henry C. Jarrett, of Niblo's Garden, will probably give you the desired information on the box.

PORTER, Milwaukee.—Send to Ed. James, 88 and 90 Centre street, this city, for what you wish.

VAN, Lincoln, Nebraska.—Such an exhibition as you mention might pay in small towns.

A CONSTANT READER, Hoboken, N. J.—Address Mr. Van Orden at the Academy of Music, New Orleans, La.

F. S. Y.—We never answer questions concerning the private affairs of professional people.

H. M. CLAY, Lexington, Ky.—Send 50 cents to Ed. James' Purchasing Bureau, Nos. 88 and 90 Centre street, New York City.

V. H.—Y having bet that he would win more than three and winning just three times.

J. T., Troy.—Both Howard's grand jump, the best on record, was 22 feet 7 inches.

CAPT. KLOTZ.—Send to Ed. James, 88 and 90 Centre street, N. Y.

WASOGEWA, New Haven.—In England.

AMATEUR.—That is a trainer's secret.

C. G.—Matter of opinion only.

EX, New Orleans.—Declined.

A MERCURIAL BLAST.

Some people, it is said, are born great; others, we are told, have greatness thrust upon them; we are probably of the latter class. In the last issue of the New York Sunday Mercury we find the following characteristic article, which we reproduce here in order that it may have a more extended circulation than it would have obtained through the sole medium of the journal in which it originally appeared:—

TAPPING THE MAILS.

THE PECULIAR WORKINGS OF FRANK QUEEN'S "CLIPPER POST OFFICE"—LETTERS THAT GO INTO IT BUT NEVER COME OUT—HOW THEY ARE OPENED, READ AND DISPOSED OF—LETTERS FOR ACTORS—VIOLATING DECENCY AND OUTRAGING THE RIGHTS OF THE PROFESSION—HOW WE ENTRAPPED AND CAUGHT HIM.

Masking instinctively regards correspondence with peculiar sanctity. The man who pries into the secrets of another under ordinary circumstances lacks little of being a villain; but nothing can justify the turpitude that, Judas-like, stoops to tamper with letters. There is no more strongly recognized position in legal jurisprudence than this; and in every civilized country the law has imposed severe penalties on the abject recreant who shall invade this sacred right. "If any person," says the United States statutes, "shall take any letter or packet, not containing any article of value, or evidence thereof, out of a post office, or shall open any letter or packet which shall have been in a post office or in custody of a mail carrier before it shall have been delivered to the person to whom it is directed, with a design to obstruct the correspondence or to pry into another's business or secrets; or shall secrete, embezzle, or destroy any such mail letter or packet; such offender, upon conviction, shall pay for every such offense, a sum not exceeding $400, and be imprisoned not exceeding twelve months."

Furthermore, it was ruled, in the well known suit of the United States versus Tanner, that "it is an offence to open a letter which has been in the post office before delivery to the person to whom it is directed, though the letter be not sealed, and was found in the office in the lawful custody of any person, and even though it was written by the defendant himself. Nor is it necessary that the name to which the letter was addressed should be the true name of the person for whom it was intended."

The Revised Statutes of the State of New York moreover provide that the penalty for opening or embezzling a letter or circular which shall not have been delivered, addressed to the U. S. mail, shall be "a fine not exceeding $100 and an imprisonment not exceeding one month."

In the face of such penalties—ignoring the question of probity—an individual who tampers with letters confided to his care must be a fit candidate for Bedlam. Above all, the editor of a journal invites ineffable obloquy by such an act.

The NEW YORK CLIPPER is a pseudo-sporting journal, conducted by a person named Queen. It has existed somewhere into the teens of years, and by blatant pretension has gained a questionable popularity with dog-fighters and rat-worriers. Moreover, it has endeavored to establish itself as a medium for refined correspondence. The New York Mercury has been a recognized and appreciated medium for "professional" business for over thirty years, and has always been regarded by the man of the CLIPPER with impotent jealousy. Imitating the latter's pretensions, Mr. Queen, in his sheet, "The CLIPPER Letter Box," but in the issue of Saturday, Sept. 24, 1865, he pirated our heading, and since then his garbled receptacle for communications between ratists, doxists, pugilists and professionalists has been "The CLIPPER Post Office," assuming with title he assumed new responsibilities. Parties who advertised in his columns were thereby led to believe that his "Post Office" was bona fide honest; that letters addressed there would be sacredly accounted for, carefully preserved and conscientiously delivered. How much their confidence has been abused the following affidavit and statement of facts will show:—

CITY AND COUNTY OF NEW YORK, ss.:—Miss Stella Hamilton, being duly sworn, doth depose and say that she personally went to the office of THE NEW YORK CLIPPER, on Centre street and Leonard street, and caused the following advertisement to be published in the said paper, which was published, and appeared under the date of April 1st, 1871:—

[COPY.]

"A YOUNG LADY OF EDUCATION, TALENT AND REFINEMENT, who has attracted considerable attention in private circles on account of her acknowledged dramatic ability, and who has occasionally appeared on the regular stage, desires to obtain a permanent engagement for light comedy in some theatre in New York, or in some southern city. Satisfactory references will be given. Address MISS STELLA HAMILTON,

"care of CLIPPER Office."

That subsequently, to wit, on Monday, the 3d day of April, 1871, she saw a circular note placed in an envelope at the office of the New York Mercury, and sealed and prepaid by a U. S. stamp, and addressed to her in the manner following:—"Miss Stella Hamilton, care of New York Post Office, New York City," and there went present at the time William Rix; that the said envelope was then handed to deponent, and she personally deposited the same in the New York Post Office, at the corner of Liberty and Nassau streets, in the presence of said Rix; that thereafter, and on several occasions, deponent applied for said circular at the said CLIPPER office, the last occasion being Saturday the 8th day of April, 1871, but that the same was never delivered to deponent at said CLIPPER office, or elsewhere, nor has she seen the same since it was so deposited in said post office and sent to said CLIPPER office. STELLA HAMILTON.

"Sworn before me this 12th day of April, 1871. THOMAS W. PITMAN, Notary Public, city and county of New York."

We had been aware for some time that the enterprise and vim of the New York Mercury had aroused the animosity of the person of the CLIPPER, and in order to establish the fact of his clumsy klephanic of letters, we inserted the above advertisement to procure the foregoing affidavit partially explains. Under the sealed and stamped outside envelope addressed to Miss Stella Hamilton, was another cover, inclosing our usual business address:—

CALDWELL & WHITNEY,
Proprietors New York Mercury,
128 Fulton street, New York city.

The CLIPPER man—rancorous in his silly jealousy—must have suspected that the letter was from the Mercury office, and suppressed or destroyed it. We should have proclaimed his villainy there and then, but we reflected that he had three loopholes by which he might wriggle out:—

1. He might have stated that the letter never reached him.

2. He might have asserted that somebody, pretending to be authorized by Miss Hamilton, call for her letters, and

3. He might have declared that the letter was mislaid in his post office.

Therefore, to make assurance doubly sure, and thoroughly to develop the CLIPPER'S cloven foot, we "put up" another job in the shape of the following advertisement, which appeared in Queen's paper issued on the 15th inst.:—

"A YOUNG MAN OF GOOD VOICE AND FIGURE,

"who has appeared to advantage as an AMATEUR, desires to go on the stage to do HEAVY BUSINESS. Managers, address

"A. R. S., care of CLIPPER Office."

Mr. Sillick, who inserted this advertisement at our instigation, received, as had Miss Hamilton, two or three letters from rural managers, but the letter sent from our office in precisely the same manner as that described was withheld. Mr. Sillick's affidavit is as follows:—

"CITY AND COUNTY OF NEW YORK, ss.—Anthony R. Sillick, being duly sworn, doth depose and say that he personally went to the office of the NEW YORK CLIPPER and caused the following advertisement to be published. [Copy above.] That on the 12th day of April he saw a letter placed in an envelope at the office of the Mercury and sealed and addressed to him in the following manner: 'A. R. S., care of CLIPPER office;' that the same letter, with three others, were deposited in the New York Post Office in the presence of James Wright; that thereafter and on several occasions deponent applied for said letter at the CLIPPER office, the last occasion being on Tuesday, the 18th of April, but that the said letter was never delivered to deponent at the said CLIPPER office or elsewhere, nor has he seen the same since it was so deposited in said Post Office and sent to said CLIPPER office. A. R. SILLICK.

"Sworn before me this 19th day of April, 1871. THOMAS W. PITMAN, Notary Public, City and County of New York."

We have no gainsay to the infallibility of logic. We would gladly have permitted him to plod his dull way in his congenial atmosphere, sacred to canines and rodents. But when he violates the sanctity of correspondence and presumes to treat the educated and honorable portion of the community as he and they were outlaws or pimps, a regard for honest journalism compels us to speak. The public can form their own opinion of the facts we have adduced, and the profession can draw their own conclusions respecting the CLIPPER and its moral influence between them. Here they can act as they see fit. We unhesitatingly challenge contradiction when we state that no letter intrusted to the Mercury post office has ever been embezzled, tampered with, withheld, or even delayed. The private correspondence of this very Queen of Slang has through our letter department without being subjected to the espionage of prying eyes or the manipulation of meddling fingers. We have evidence to show that dozens of letters addressed by different parties to the care of the CLIPPER within the last three months are unable to reach the parties to whom they were addressed; but let the following suffice. A well known Philadelphia gentleman, under the date of April 10th, writes us, unsolicited, as follows:—

"PHILADELPHIA, April 10, 1871.

"The CLIPPER has in the past months advertised several letters for me, and according to their rule, I enclosed a stamped envelope addressed to myself in the care of a friend's address, but never a letter did they send me. In case some person else got the letters, they could have written me, but this is a cheap way of raising postage stamps."

A few emphatic words and we have done. We have exposed the CLIPPER'S crimes and stated their legal punishment. We mercifully forbear to press the matter before a legal tribunal, pitying while we despise the petty meanness in which it has been detected. But we are determined to do our whole duty to our outraged and insulted friends of the dramatic profession; and we therefore give public notice that if the offense be again repeated, we shall teach this fellow that a United States Government stamp, when placed upon a sealed envelope, secures absolute protection against tamperers with the mails, and that prosecution and conviction will speedily follow any further violation of the sanctity of private correspondence.

The reputation of the NEW YORK CLIPPER and "the man Queen," for fair dealing, honesty and straightforward business transactions, is too exalted to be at all injured by anything the gentlemen of the Mercury may see fit to publish; and, though it is stated that he who touches filth may expect to be defiled, we shall have to risk the contamination for once. Mr. Bret Harte has asserted that

"For ways that are dark and tricks that are vain
The heathen Chinee is peculiar."

We might, with equal truth, assert that in the same line our contemporary referred to is likewise peculiar. To the many thousands, both here and in Europe, who have had business and other relations with us, it is unnecessary to say a word in refutation of the charges made in the article quoted; to those who do not know us, and who, should we make no response, might misconstrue our silence, we deviate from our rule to avoid all newspapozial controversy and offer a few remarks,

"Which the same we shall rise to explain."

For years we have devoted certain space in the CLIPPER to advertising letters for professional people whose whereabouts might not be known to the writers; in doing this, we have entailed an extra expense upon ourselves, for in most cases we use our own envelopes in which to forward letters sent for, and in many instances we affix stamps where the parties sending for letters have forgotten to enclose them, knowing, as we do, the importance attached to the prompt receipt of bona fide communications; for the labor of hunting through our letters for those sent or called for, for putting addresses on fresh envelopes, taking them to the post office, etc., we make no charge, whatever; neither do we charge for advertising the same. We do this for the accommodation of the profession, who, unaided by this medium, might be without a reliable and trustworthy means of communication, in so far as the members of the show profession are almost constantly on the move. We likewise are made the custodians of money sent to parties in this country from relatives and friends in the old; and were it at all necessary we could produce thousands of affidavits from ladies and gentlemen of the profession who have profited by their use of the CLIPPER POST OFFICE. Regarding the affidavits in the article referred to, we presume that they have been made in good faith, "according to orders," but by subsequent showing it appears that letters from "rural managers" for "Miss Hamilton" and "Mr. Sillick" were duly received by those parties through our office, while the bogus ones sent through another office were not received, it is alleged. We exercise the greatest care and caution to prevent letters from falling into the hands of those for whom they are not intended, similarity in names leading to mistakes in all post offices; and to guard against error in delivery, we keep a standing notice at the head of our postal department requesting writers to state the business of the party addressed, where there are several of the same name in the profession; and so great is the confidence reposed in the CLIPPER that postmasters in various cities send packages of letters to us to be delivered to persons whom they have been unable to find. Regarding the "well-known Philadelphia gentleman" and his stamped envelope, we can say nothing, as the gentleman has neglected to give his name. The tricks which induced the sending of the letters to the lady and gentleman noticed seem to have been in vain, which, perhaps, should be regretted, for the sake of the parties most directly interested; as we have no recollection of the particular letters alluded to—sending and delivering so many as we do every week—it is possible that the parties interested in the little game at the office of our respected contemporary have been playing points on each other. That the profession should prefer the CLIPPER to any other medium of communication is but natural, seeing that years of trust and trial has taught them that ours is the only reliable means by which they can reach each other in their traveling expeditions; that our friends do not make use of the Mercury more than they do is no fault of ours we assure our bellicose neighbors, and we sincerely regret that the spirit of jealousy exhibited by our respected contemporary should have induced Messrs. Cauldwell & Whitney to so far lose sight of the amenities of gentlemen as to make an unprovoked, unwarrantable attack upon the character of one who has never willfully done them a wrong, and whose reputation, unsullied before the world, is what has contributed to gain the CLIPPER the confidence and support of the theatrical and sporting people everywhere.

CLOSE OF THE SEASON—the oyster season, we mean, gentle reader. With the end of April terminates, according to some doubtful authority, the time when oysters are in their prime; for we are told that oysters are neither good "broiled, fried, stewed or raw," unless the name of the month has an r in it, and as four months must now elapse before the r comes into play again, we must abstain from eating the luscious shell fish until September sheds its smile upon us. But seriously, in this city, oysters are never out of season, but may be had in every style throughout the year.

WINANS, who was so "overcome" during the last few days of the session at Albany, has written a piece explaining his emotion, but the Reps. don't seem to put much confidence in it after reading it, and have come to the conclusion that it resembles a hungry fish, because, as our minstrel friends would say, "it needs de ratio !"

COMING HOME.—Our legislative representatives, who are returning home, are having big receptions, especially those who are on the winning side. Some of these friends of our great public fuctionaries, in giving testimonials to the latter, put us in mind of old time physicians, because first they sup, and then they bleed them.

THOSE PUGILISTIC CELEBRITIES, Billy Edwards and Tim Collins, must have their eyes about them, or the Dutch grocer near our office will rob them of their laurels, as he is striving hard to become champion of light weights !

COBURN AND MACE'S MATCH.

THE TOSS FOR CHOICE OF GROUND WON BY MACE.

Less than three weeks will intervene between the present writing and the coming of the day agreed upon by Jim Mace and Joe Coburn for their battle for the championship and two thousand dollars, May 11th, and the interest therein keeps pace with the strides of Father Time, consequent upon the very favorable aspect which everything connected therewith has all along worn, and the certainty that both men mean fighting and are doing everything in their power to secure fitness for the fray. The inquiries which we are continually receiving concerning the principals, the probable place of fighting, how to get there, etc., sufficiently indicate how wide-spread is the interest felt in the matter throughout the country. On Monday afternoon, April 24th, the parties met at the CLIPPER office, for the purpose of tossing for choice of locale, Coburn attending in person, and Mace being represented by his cousin, Pooley, and Jim Cusick, his trainer. Among the throng of sporting men who were attracted by the circumstance, we observed that tall son of Gotham, John Lawrence, who entertains a holy horror for modern shirt collar innovations; Bill Clark, of the "Arbour;" Harry Hill, the final stakeholder in the match; Jim and Mike Coburn, brothers to Joe; Phil. Hargrave, Mace's partner, smiling as usual; Butt Riley, Bob Smith, the boxer, ped. and ring commissary; Tim Collins and his trainer, Jim Smith, champion walkist; Alderman Mulligan, Al. Worden, Billy McManus, Johnny O'Brien, of Ward 14, and a host of others, numbering over one hundred and fifty, which shows the excitement created by the match in this city. The business of the day was gotten through with quite speedily, and was marked by the utmost harmony. Pooley Mace tossed the piece and won, afterward acquainting Joe with the point from whence the start would be made and about the distance to be traveled to the place of fighting in Canada, though he could not mention the exact location; he must do so, however, not later than the 1st prox. On Wednesday, 26th inst., Jim Cusick, on the part of Mace, and Coburn's representative are to proceed to the point of departure for the purpose of chartering steamers to convey the men and excursionists to the scene, and completing other arrangements. Joe expressed himself as perfectly satisfied with the way things ended—just as much so as if he had the naming of the battle ground—and said that he desired that both men go to the scene of conflict upon the same boat, so that there will be less probability of the authorities interfering, or anything else transpiring to prevent the fight coming off. Bob Smith, the trainer, second, etc., has been delegated to provide the ropes and stakes, and will use those formerly owned by the late Kit Burns for the outer ring, procuring a new set for the inner circle, it having been expressly stipulated that there shall be two rings, both to prevent crowding and afford those who attend a better opportunity to witness the combat. Coburn's condition was commented upon favorably, everyone remarking how exceedingly well he looked, his brown skin seeming as tough as leather well stained, and his eye being bright and clear. He has worked hard, and may be said, even now, to be in tip-top fettle—certainly better than he has ever been heretofore. Mace has not been seen by us since our last, but we learn that he has been laboring with undiminished zeal during the week, doing a large amount of work regularly, and that the "march of improvement" has gone on in his case in a manner equally gratifying. He was the recipient of a benefit at Dempsey's Literary Hall, New Brighton, S. I., on the night of April 17th, which was attended by about two hundred persons—not a bad turn-out for that section. The sparring portion of the entertainment was first class, consisting of a set-to between Dan and Jim Kerrigan, Pooley Mace and Jack Smith (of Portsmouth), Wooley and Steve Benfords (a brother of the English champion sculler), Jim Mace and John Mason, an old timer, and the wind-up between the beneficiaire and Dooney Harris. Although these were more than ordinarily fine displays, the closing bout was, of course, the best of all by long odds. To be sure Mace's star shone brilliantly, but "the old man" did better than we've seen him do for many a long day. Harry Hill also appeared and went through the exercises with his heavy clubs with that grace and skill for which he is noted, gaining much applause. A sable band of minstrels also assisted in making the exhibition enjoyable. Bill Tovee went all the way from the outskirts of Brooklyn to superintend the exercises, which he did, as ever, in a most satisfactory manner. Coburn's final appearance prior to the fight will take place at Masonic Hall, Thirteenth street, between Third and Fourth avenues, on Thursday evening, when there'll doubtless be an immense assemblage, for all, friends and foes, will be anxious to see Joe's form and note how he performs when faced by his old friend, the scientific Prof. Bill Clark, who insmaster of nearly all of them with the mittens and can hold his own with the best while his wind lasts, as he's proven time and again. Billy Dwyer now on his way from California, will be on hand and set to with Owney Geoghegan also, while Johnny Dwyer, George Rooke, Mike Coburn, Geo. Seddons, Arthur Chambers, Butt Riley and other bright and shining lights will assist; likwise Col. Monstery and Capt. Bonner, who guard in a grand assault at arms with the broadsword, in the use of which they are experts. The 30th will be Coburn's last Sunday at his present quarters, the Observatory Hotel, Ninetieth street and Fifth avenue, and those who can't "take in" the fight should bear it in mind. Mace remains at his house on Twenty-third street, but will leave the city early next week, we believe, changing to a spot near the starting point. He'll be glad to take his friends by the hand before he goes. Coburn has received his fighting shoes, which are well and strongly made. He informs us that he will not issue any colors before the fight, but that he will have the same standards he went to Ireland to fight Mace under in '64. Coburn has enough of the original colors left for all that he requires of them, viz.: One for himself, one to tie around the stake, and enough for his seconds and umpire. If he wins the fight he will then have co ors gotten up, as the emblematic of the Emerald Isle (the land of his birth) and America, the land of his adoption. A friend of Coburn's informs us that he has $100 that he is willing to invest at the odds offered on Mace by some of his friends, viz., 2 to 1.

TESTIMONIAL TO O'BALDWIN.—In another part of this issue appears a paragraph alluding to the liberation of Ned O'Baldwin and preparations being made by his Boston friends to extend a warm welcome to the long-suffering gladiator. Since it went to press we have received a letter from Jim Shea, informing us that a grand testimonial will be tendered him at the Olympic Theatre, in that city, on the evenings of Friday and Saturday, April 28th and 29th. The reason for having it take place so soon after his arrival in town is that the stockholders of said theatre are about to dispose of their lease and it could not be secured for any other date. He will probably appear on the stage with three or four of Boston's most ambitious glove practitioners, and maybe have a turn with Johnny Dwyer or some other big gun from this vicinity. He has been tendered the assistance of all the local "talent," and besides the fistic displays there'll be singing, dancing an exhibition of athletic feats, etc., so that an excellent show is ensured.

HICKEN'S SHOW.—Harry Hicken, one of the most scientific of our light-weights, took a benefit at the Arbour on Saturday night, 22nd inst., and had a very good house. The show was a satisfactory one, embracing boxing matches between Wharton and Cronin, Smith and Madden, Patsy Hogan and Geo. Seddons (a very fine exhibition,) Warwick Edwards and Young Hanley, Siler and Saunders, Love and McClellan, Coburn and Bill Smith, and Hicken and Dooney Harris, who wound up the entertainment in a style to call forth much applause and frequent commendatory exclamations. There was likewise a song and dance and feats of contortionism. Uncle Bill Tovee was "boss," of course.

DAN CARR TO MIKE O'CONNOR.—The victor over Brennan and O'Meally, feeling deeply chagrined at the unsatisfactory manner in which his fight with Mike O'Connor ended, is anxious to try it on again, feeling certain that he can polish the latter off in very short order. Read his challenge, which was accompanied by twenty five dollars to make it read straight:—

MILWAUKEE, Wis., April 19, 1871.

FRANK QUEEN.—DEAR SIR,—I place $25 in your hands to fight him for from $300 to $1,000 a side, the fight to take place half way between Dubuque and Milwaukee; or I will fight him in the same ring that Mace and Coburn fight in. I will fight him for whatever sum he has a mind to name. He is a cur, and I will prove that he is one if he meets me again. The day that I went into the ring I was not able to fight a child. I had been sick previously and when he could not whip me in the condition I was in, I am certain he cannot do it now. He has been blowing and scandalizing me through the papers. What I have done I have done honorably which the world knows. Yours truly,

DAN CARR.

DEATH OF PATSY REARDON.—We have received, through Tom Allen, intelligence of the death, from consumption, of the noted middle weight pugilist, Patsy Reardon, which occurred at St. Louis on February 27th. He arrived there from Vicksburg some time prior, very ill, and Tom did all in his power to alleviate his sufferings, but the physician in attendance could find him it was a hopeless case, and Reardon was conveyed to the Sisters' Hospital, where he breathed his last three days afterwards, though having the benefit of the best medical treatment. Deceased was born in 1837 and fought eight times in the ring, winning four battles and making draws of the balance. He arrived in this country on the 22d of January, 1863.

SEDDONS AND CHAMBERS.—One of the backers of Arthur Chambers received a letter from him on the 24th inst., authorizing him to make a match with George Seddons for whatever amount he was willing to put up, for any weight at which he could mill (as low as 114 pounds,) the fight to take place not less than three weeks after signing articles. This shows conclusively that Chambers is ready to fight Seddons, but the gentleman alluded to does not care to make the match until he sees Chambers, who will be in the city in a few days.

NO REPLY.—The challenge promulgated in last week's issue from Patsy Hogan, to any novice in the country to fight for a couple of hundred dollars or a purse, at weight ranging from 120lbs. to 128lbs., in the same ring in which Tim Collins and Billy Edwards do battle, has not yet been responded to. He is still prepared to make good his offer, and if any one cares to tackle him let them call at the Arbour, 50 West Houston street, on Tuesday evening, 25th inst., and they will be accommodated.

CHAS. B. RICH, who was engaged by Joe Coburn, some time ago, to act as agent, has, we are informed by the latter, decamped with $185, given him by Coburn to secure a theatre in this city for an exhibition. A warrant has been issued for his arrest, as Joe has allowed sufficient time to elapse since his disappearance to enable him to "square" matters.

AROUND AGAIN.—The friends of John Grindell, the once celebrated ten mile runner, will be gratified to learn that he is again able to be about and is slowly recovering from the effects of the painful and serious surgical operation to which he was compelled to submit some time ago. We hope he may soon be restored to perfect health.

TOM OXFORD (Coyne's novice), of Newark, having expressed a desire to fight Patsy Hogan, the latter says he'll make a match for $300 a side and a purse, if Tom and his backers will call at Bill Clark's, 50 West Houston street, on Tuesday evening, 25th inst.

GEORGE ROOKE and Arthur Chambers appeared at the Baltimore Opera House on Monday evening, 17th inst., the feature of the entertainment being the display between the former and the "Phenomenon."

COL. MOONEY accompanies Billy Dwyer to this city from San Francisco, and there is a strong probability of the latter being matched with Geo. Rooke.

THE "TIP" for the coming fight between Mace and Coburn can be had at Kinney's, 57th street and Second avenue.

WE HAVE LETTERS for Jim Mace (?) and James Harris, pedestrian.

COCKING AT THE CRESCENT CITY.—An extra main was arranged to be fought between the representatives of Kentucky and Louisiana, at the new pit, corner of Roman and Dauphine streets, New Orleans, La., on Saturday night, the 15th inst., Mr. O'Neil representing Kentucky and Mr. Chapel the Pelican State. The agreement was that each produce eleven cocks, and fight all that fell in for $50 a battle. Seven fell in, and after some rattling fighting Kentucky won four and Louisiana three battles.

WANTED FOR A SPRING SEASON
a Juvenile Lady and First Old Woman. Also a Heavy Man and Walking Gentleman.

CUPID'S FOIBLES, FOLLIES AND FANCIES.

TO FAITH DERRICK.

WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER.

Ah, lady bright! a few cold words were ours;
We only met, it seemed, again to part.
I gazed upon thee but a few brief hours,
And yet it was a life-time to my heart.
I need not praise thee; fluttered as thou art
In the bright circle of thy radiant sphere;
I dare not praise thee, lest my thoughts should start
In burning words you would not deign to hear.

But often, bright-eyed lady, I will ponder
Upon the witchery of thy low breath'd tones;
So sad, yet sweet; was't a requiem, lady,
Warbled above the grave of lost loved ones?
My fancy fain would picture you as happy,
And mirror forth thy calm, true, earnest face,
As some pure saint's, so good, so kind and holy;
Ah, yield me in thy memory but a place.

Forgive this wayward heart that dares to fashion
This lay to thee; God knows I mean not wrong:
Thou beauteous child of nature and of passion,
Thou brightest spirit in the realm of song.
Thy heart is weary, you have learned the lesson
That women always learn, alas! too well.
Ah, lady bright, an aching heart is thine,
With woman witchery and a poet's spell.

Powhattan, W. Va. EDGAR SYMONS.

MRS. LAURA D. FAIR'S BIOGRAPHY, ETC.

The trial of the above named female for the shooting of Judge A. P. Crittenden, in San Francisco, Cal., which is just concluding, it is announced, some particulars of which have already been given in the CLIPPER, has furnished the press of that region with racy matter, including a series of love letters, too copious for us to quote entire, but as an index to the remainder we here give one dated December 26th:—

MY OWN DARLING.—I have had no company since you left. Dr. Bryarly and Jude Barton are the only gentlemen who have been in the house. I don't wish for company; I only want you. You ask me if it is not strange that you should have so violent a feeling of love at your age? Why, darling, if you were a hundred years old, you would love some one just as well. You can no more live and be happy without loving and being loved than I can, and life to me without love is a barren waste. As to the strength and depth of your love for me, I account for it in this way: not that I am so capable of inspiring such a passion, but simply that love begets love, and I loved you first—yes, idolized you; and that out of sympathy and compassion, returned that love. That's how it is. Now, just tell me, darling, if that is not nicely answered? Don't wonder that I can indulge in a little humor to-night, for your dear letters have made me so happy. I do love to be loved with a wild, extravagant passion, and to be told so, and to feel that it is so, and then the clouds seem to be passing away at last. I shall sleep well to-night, darling, with your loving words in my ears, and your image in my heart. Bless you! Good night. Yours, forever, LAURA.

The publication of the letters that had passed between the two parties only served to intensify public interest in the trial. On the succeeding morning the court room was crowded to its utmost capacity, and scores of people were compelled to leave, being unable to gain admission. On that day a scene occurred in the court room that created great excitement and served as an evidence of Mrs. Fair's ungovernable temper.

By way of rebutting the testimony given by her with reference to her intimacy with Crittenden, Mrs. Crittenden was called to the stand. The defence having claimed that Mr. Crittenden went to Virginia City and palmed himself off as a single man, Mrs. Crittenden was called to prove that Mrs. Fair knew at that time that Crittenden had a family. She testified that she was in company with her husband when the latter first met Mrs. Fair at the Tahoe House, in Virginia City. She herself met Fair in San Francisco a few months later, but never dreamed at that there was any intimacy between her husband and that woman. She had heard many scandals regarding Mrs. Fair, but at her husband's solicitation permitted herself to be introduced out of pure sympathy for one whom she supposed to be friendless and alone in the world. What took place at the hotel where they first met is thus described by the lady on the stand:—

Q.—Now, will you state what conversation you had with her on that occasion at the hotel? A.—Well, I first went to dinner with her. Of course the ordeal was a very severe one to me.

Counsel for the defence moved to strike out the answer, and it was so ordered.

Witness.—I was taken sick at the dinner table. I became sick from the effects of going to dinner with her before four hundred people.

Mr. Cook.—I ask that that be stricken out.

Witness.—I do not see why.

Judge.—Let it be stricken out.

Witness.—I then left the table and went up to MY room. After dinner Mrs. Fair came into my room; she found that I was sick; whether she knew the reason or not, of course I cannot say. She came to the lounge where I was lying; she kneeled on her knees before me, took my hand, and begged to be allowed to kiss it.

Mrs. Fair.—That's a lie.

Quite a sensation was created by this exhibition on the part of the defendant, and for some few moments the examination of the witness was suspended. Mrs. Fair's eyes blazed with fury, and her whole face lighted up. Even when, at the solicitation of her counsel and Capt. Knox, the Deputy Sheriff, who has her in charge, she calmed herself to some extent, the vicious glitter remained in her eyes, and her barely restrained fury showed itself in nervous twitchings of the mouth and that cold semi-smile which means so much more of evil than the darkest frown. Until Mrs. Crittenden left the stand Mrs. Fair's eyes were fixed with a literal glitter upon her.

Mrs. Crittenden appeared perfectly unmoved by the insult, and when she resumed her evidence her voice gave no token of emotion. In fact, in all Mrs. Crittenden's evidence the absence of all emotion save an uncompromising hardness toward the defendant had been very noticeable.

When order had been restored the witness resumed:—

Witness.—She said, with tears in her eyes, "Mrs. Crittenden, you are the first woman that has shown me kindness for ten years, and there is nothing on earth that I would not do for you?"

Q.—How long did you remain at the hotel after that?

A.—I remained there until September. Then my husband, who was still here, took me to the Cosmopolitan and fixed my rooms for me.

Mrs. Crittenden subsequently stated that she first knew of her husband's intimacy with Mrs. Fair from that lady herself, and that she told her of it at her own house in Virginia City, whither she (Mrs. C.) had gone to visit her husband. She testified at great length as to what took place on that visit, but seems to have left the jury in some doubt as to how she received the startling intelligence of her husband's infidelity. At a subsequent interview held with Mrs. Fair in San Francisco, the subject was again reverted to, and the scene which then occurred Mrs. Crittenden described as follows:—

Q.—But did you ever at any subsequent time have any conversation at any other place? A.—Yes sir, I did, in San Francisco.

Q.—Please to tell us all about that; where that was, when it was, and what took place? A.—It was in January, two years ago this past January. She had just returned from the east a short time before. I had reason to fear that this thing was true.

Objected to as not in rebuttal. Objection overruled and defendant excepted.

Witness—It was on Sunday, during church time. I knew where her rooms were, and I went on Kearny street to the house kept by Mrs. Hammersmith. She had rooms on the floor above the stores, or whatever was underneath on Kearny street. I went up and knocked at the door. She was in the room. The Chinaman was in the room at the time, but she sent him out. I spoke to her and sat down. I then told her that I had come there to entreat her for the sake of my husband and children to go away from town. She said that she would not that she cared for him, and that he cared for her; and that unless he and the world did not know it, she told her that he could not say the word; that whether he wanted to say it or not, he could not say it; that it was her duty as a woman and a mother, for the sake of her child, whom she was bringing to shame and ruin, for her own sake, for his sake and the sake of his children, not to lead him to shame. She said she would not leave him; that I was not his wife; that I was an adulteress. It of course startled me considerably—that view of the matter; as I had been taught that when I vowed to love, honor and obey, that death did us part, in sickness and in health, that I was doing my duty so to act. I then plead with her and talked with her for some time. She still said that she would not leave him. "Very well, then," I said:—"Madam, there is one thing you may be certain of; you may lead him to leave his family and live with your openly. I don't think you can. I do not think he is so lost to honor and to love for his children. But, if you do, I will never (she had told me to sue for a divorce), I will never sue for a divorce, so help me God! There is nothing he can do, nothing you can make him do, that will ever make me bring the responsibility of a divorce upon my children." I left her with those words.

Q.—Was anything said in that conversation in reference to Mr. Crittenden on obtaining a divorce? A.—Never one word, sir. She asked me:—"Why don't you get a divorce and let him marry me?" said I:—"I will not sue for a divorce, and he dare not."

Q.—That is what you said to her? A.—Yes, sir. "For if he did he should not have it in a court in the land." That was the last time I ever spoke to her. She told me at that time that she had separated from her mother on his account. Two days afterwards I met her in the street with her mother.

MRS. FAIR FINED FOR CONTEMPT.

After some further unimportant testimony Mrs. Crittenden concluded her testimony and was discharged. The court then said:—

"There is one thing that becomes the duty of the Court to notice—i that is the gross insult that has been perpetrated upon a witness. It is useless to conceal the fact that the conduct of Mrs. Fair during the cause she must be taken there at the adjournment of the Court to-night. That proceedings may be properly conducted hereafter, and no witness insulted, I impose a fine of $250 on Mrs. Fair for contempt of Court. Let execution issue immediately."

Mrs. Laura D. Fair is 33 years of age. She is a native of Memphis, and her maiden name was Lane. When Laura was 14 years old her mother, who was a widow, married Mr. Richardson, a man of 66 daughters and a son, to New Orleans. In New Orleans Laura formed the acquaintance of a Mr. Stone, and was married to him when but sixteen years of age. Stone died one year after the marriage, and a twelvemonth his widow was married a third time to a Mr. Grayson. With Grayson she was very unhappy, and after living with him only six months they separated, and she sued for a divorce, before a decision had been rendered in the divorce suit she went to California, arriving there in September, 1858. Shortly after her arrival in San Francisco, she removed to Shasta, at which place she became acquainted with Col. William D Fair, a lawyer of Siskyion county, and was married to him by Judge Daligerfield, in Yreka, in 1859.

Mrs. Fair, having rare personal attractions, with great natural tact and extraordinary musical talents, soon attracted a host of admirers. Her husband, though he had a lucrative practice, could not stand the many extravagances of his wife, and was compelled to remove from the scene of her triumphs to San Francisco, to which place he came in 1860. Change of location did not in any manner seem to change the course of her conduct, but on the contrary, she plunged into the vortex of the excitements of a city life with redoubled vigor. Her husband protested, but without avail. Col. Fair was a man of keen sensibilities, and the conduct of his wife made such an impression on his mind, that one day, while in the medical office of Dr. Murphy, a warm personal friend, whither he had gone to consult abt. t his domestic troubles, he committed suicide by blowing his brains out. The public are not knowing to the motives which prompted Col. Fair to kill himself, deeply sympathized with his young and lovely widow, and a subscription which was set on foot for her run up to a large sum. About one year after the death of her husband, some of her friends, believing that she had dramatic talent, advised her to adopt the stage as a profession. She consented, and after studying awhile, made her debut in the Metropolitan Theatre, San Francisco, as Lucy Teazle, in "The School for Scandal."

The house was packed, but her rendition of the character was not successful. Her career on the stage was brief, but its fruits enabled her to buy a half interest in the Tahoe House, Virginia City. Her partner in the hotel was one Thomison. At the outbreak of the rebellion Thompson, who was a Union man, hoisted the Union flag over the hotel. To this proceeding, Mrs. Fair, whose proclivities were Southern, objected. She armed herself with a revolver, and ascending to the roof, cut the halyards and let the flag down. Thompson attempted to prevent her, and she shot and wounded him in the arm. Mrs. Fair was tried for the offence. Mr. Crittenden, who was on a visit to Virginia City from San Francisco, and was boarding at the Tahoe House, acted as her counsel. The jury acquitted her without leaving their seats. Shortly after this occurrence Mrs. Fair removed to San Francisco, where she was followed by Crittenden. There, as well as in Nevada, she was on very intimate terms with him. They apparently made no effort to keep their liason private, although Crittenden was the head of a family and a family of grown sons and daughters. They were frequently seen in public and their intimacy was kept up a number of years. In 1866 their first separation took place. Mrs. Fair went back to the Tahoe House to her mother, who was still occupying that hotel in Virginia City. Crittenden yielded to his wicked passion, and pursued her thither. The mother insisted on his at once getting a divorce from his wife and marrying Mrs. Fair according to agreement, or else that he should immediately cease his dastardly intercourse with her. Crittenden promised to do the handsome thing and left.

Mrs. Fair is said to be one of the most fascinating women that ever destroyed the peace of a family. She is above the ordinary height of women, symmetrical in form, graceful in carriage, and infatuating in manners and magnetism. Her hair is a dark chestnut, her eyes dark brown, and her complexion as clear as that of a child of three years. Her hands and feet are small and elegantly moulded. With the exception of her liason with Crittenden, she was always wary and cunning, and the terror of married women wherever she went. It was evident to men of the world that, although she never did anything which could call for censure, she was a smouldering volcano, and not averse to a warm flirtation. Men thronged around her wherever she went, and women hated her with inexpressible virulence. She had the entree to the best society in Kentucky and New Orleans. She is not a thoroughbred, but is vivacious, sprightly and magnetic, and when she entered a salon or a ball-room the gentlemen would desert other ladies to gather around her and compete for her smiles and recognition. She never allowed herself to be under any pecuniary obligation to men; but always delighted in taking their husbands from young married women. She had a mania for stock speculations, and an immense gift for luring bankers and merchants into her schemes. Her temper is exceedingly violent, and she has been known to break the head of a servant with a chair. She is fond of champagne, and sometimes takes too much of it at dinner. In short, she is a beautiful, heartless, fearless, terrible tigress, who loves and hates like a wild beast, and is always ready to murder anybody who crosses her passions.

P. S.—Since the above was in type the telegraph has informed us that the case has been given to the jury, and their verdict is anxiously awaited.

AN UNPRINCIPLED PRINCIPAL.—Dr. Cobb, formerly surgeon of a Maine regiment, and lately principal of Wilton (Me.) Academy, eloped, quite recently with one of his pupils, a girl of 17, named Dow, from Farmington. They were traced to the Preble House, in Portland, by the father of the girl, and he has pushed on westward after the fugitives. Dr. Cobb leaves a wife and several children. The affair has caused considerable excitement in Maine.

MARRIED IN HASTE.—A stranger in Albany offered $10, the other day, it is said, to any man who would get him a wife. The offer was in medately taken up, and in a few minutes a blooming damsel appeared. In less than thirty minutes the two were coupled. The stranger is reputed to be wealthy and eccentric.

AN UNFULFILLED PROMISE TO WED.

MISS SCHUMAKER SUES MARK LANGLEY FOR $15,000.

Elizabeth Schumaker has commenced a suit in the Circuit Court of St. Louis against Mark Langley to recover $15,000 damages for breach of promise of marriage. She states in her petition that she is a single and unmarried person, and that on the 26th of August, 1869, she became acquainted with the defendant at her place of residence in St. Louis; that he was introduced to her by his cousin; that he professed much admiration for her; expressed himself as delighted with having made her acquaintance, and as being anxious to cultivate her society; also, that he requested the privilege and pleasure of calling upon her, which he did frequently and repeatedly up to within a few days before filing this petition. Defendant became so ardent and faithful in his attentions and admiration for plaintiff that he so far succeeded in ingratiating himself in the good-will and esteem of plaintiff as to win her entire confidence, love and respect; that when absent from plaintiff he would write, and send her the most touching and glowing epistles; and that on one occasion, as if under the inspiration and infatuation of a wild and impetuous lover he wrote and sent these words to plaintiff:—"Daisy of the daises, sweet violet of the color blue; something I've got in the good-will and esteem of plaintiff as to win her entire confidence, love and respect; that when absent from plaintiff he would write, and send her the most touching and glowing epistles; and that on one occasion, as if under the inspiration and infatuation of a wild and impetuous lover he wrote and sent these words to plaintiff:—"Daisy of the daises, sweet violet of the color blue; something I've got in the good-will and esteem of plaintiff that he so far succeeded in ingratiating himself

BASE BALL.

PENNSYLVANIA BASE BALL ASSOCIATION.

A special meeting of this association was held on Tuesday evening, April 18th, at A. J. Reach's, at which time the following resolutions were offered by Mr. John J. Rogers, and were adopted with but one dissenting voice. The resolutions led to an animated discussion, in which Messrs. Rogers and Kerns, of the Atlantic, took an important part. The following are the resolutions:—

Whereas, On March 16th and 17th, 1871, there convened in the city of New York, two conventions, which culminated in the creation of two organizations, entitled respectively the "National Association of Amateur Base Ball Players," and the "National Association of Professional Base Ball Players," which, according to the declarations of their several officers, superceded and dissolved the "National Association of Base Ball Players," and

Whereas, It is due to the base ball fraternity that some public official disavowal of these declarations should be given by the officers and members of the said National Association of Base Ball Players, therefore

Resolved, By the Pennsylvania State Association, that

1. The National Association is composed of state associations and of individual clubs in states where there are not sufficient clubs to form associations.

2. That, therefore, clubs belonging to state associations cannot, by any individual action, withdraw from the National Association of Base Ball Players, but must first resign from or sever their connection with state associations in the usual legal and prescribed manner.

3. That it is folly to suppose, much more to declare, that the action of the Olympic Club, of Philadelphia, in joining the National Association of Amateur Base Ball Players, and of the Athletic Club, of Philadelphia, in becoming members of the National Association of Professional Base Ball Players, could either impair the status or rights of the forty-six (46) other clubs belonging to the Pennsylvania State Association, or even dissolve their connection with the National Association of Base Ball Players.

4. That a copy of these resolutions be transmitted to the secretaries of the three national associations, and that they be published in the NEW YORK CLIPPER and Philadelphia Sunday Mercury.

It seems to us that the action of this association in this matter is unnecessary. There is no doubt that the National Association has year by year been losing its influence over the clubs of the country, and the proceedings of November last were sufficient to prove to any one that it could no longer exist under the auspices which controlled its legislation on that occasion. The business of legislating in the interests of the fraternity at large has been governed by influences which have brought about just such a condition of things as exist at present; and we question whether anything could be done to improve upon the present state of the association now in existence. For instance—the twelve professional clubs of the country have a national association of their own which legislates in the interests of that class specially. Then the amateurs have a National association of their own, which answers every purpose of legislating for the benefit of that class of ball players. Then there are the several state base ball associations, which are now independent organizations, governing only such clubs as are located in each state the association belongs to. Of what use, therefore, is the association known as the late "National association?" None whatever. The Pacific association, the Louisiana association, and other state and sectional associations, have hitherto existed independent of the national Association, and they can still do so. The fact is, our country is too large, and is composed of too many sections having different climates, peoples and customs for one single association to rule it; and experience has shown that the system of state associations existing on an independent footing is the only system likely to be permanent. Therefore, we hope to see the clubs of the Pacific slope governed entirely by a Pacific association; the clubs of the west by a western amateur association, or by their individual state associations; the southern, northern and eastern clubs the same. By this means every club in the country will become amenable to control, and an "association club," and by no other means can they be, that we can see at present.

In only one thing is it necessary that they should be united as one body—and that is in regard to adopting a regular code of playing rules, which can be done by calling a convention of delegates from all base ball associations, state or sectional, to meet every two or three years to revise the rules. There should be no division on that point.

ECKFORD vs. CHELSEA.

The second practice game of the Eckford nine of Brooklyn, took place April 19th, on the Union grounds, and, as before, the weather was very unpleasant, rain falling before the game terminated. The opponents of the Eckfords were the Chelsea club nine, a crack junior organization of Williamsburgh, which last year won a ball from the Putnams, of Troy. They mustered a very strong team, their positions at first base, short field, catcher and pitcher, being attended to in excellent style, their little stort-stop, Metcalfe, proving himself to be "a bully little player" as he boys called him, while Dehlman, at first base, played like a second Joe Start. The Eckfords turned out in full strength, and they anticipated getting rid of the Chelsea boys as easily as they had the Tony Pastors; but the Chelseas were not to be disposed of so cheaply, and before the third innings terminated, Martin realized the fact that he would have work to do to beat the juniors. But very few people were present, the crowd being gathered in the adjoining lot to see Barnum's great show. The game opened with the Eckfords at the bat, and their two first strikers were easily disposed of, and but for a wild throw, their third would have been; at any rate, they did not earn a run, though after escaping a whitewash they ran up a score of 5. On the other side the boys led off quite spiritedly, and by some excellent hits they punished Martin pretty to the tune of three runs, which rather astonished that renowned pitcher. In the second innings the Eckfords were whitewashed in admirable style, Metcalfe, West and Dehlman making a beautiful double play, the boys showing themselves to be well posted in the points of the game. On the other side, by a high throw to 2d base, the Chelseas were allowed to score one run, the tally now standing at 5 to 4 only in favor of the Yellow Stockings. This was altogether a different condition of things from that laid out by the Eckfords in their programme of the game, and, consequently, the contest began to assume quite an interesting position. In the succeeding five innings, however, the Chelseas had to retire without adding a run to their score, Martin studying his batter well and pitching with his old effect. The Eckfords, on the other hand, found it no easy task to punish the Chelsea pitcher, they not earning a single run until their sixth innings, McCormack being capitally supported in the field. In the 6th innings the Eckfords woke up at the bat, and, being assisted by some loose fielding, they added seven runs to their score, and in their 7th innings they added three more. Of these five were earned, and that was the total of their earned runs in the game. In the last two innings the Chelseas batted well for five runs, a fine double play by Nelson being noteworthy. The final result was the success of the Eckfords by a score of 22 to 9, a good game under the circumstances. Rain began to fall as the 8th innings was commenced, and the umpire should have called the game five minutes after the rain began to fall, this being his imperative duty. But he was very lax in interpreting the rules, besides being entirely unacquainted with the new rules, for which, by the way, he is excusable, Haynie having prevented umpires from getting posted in time. MANSFIELD vs. YALE COLLEGE NINE.

This game came off in Middletown, Ct., on April 15th, on the Mansfields' ground, before quite a crowd of people, considering the nature of the day, which was very cold and windy. The Yales were the challenging party. This being the first time the new nine of the Mansfield had come together, it was expected they would make many errors, but to the surprise of all they went in and played a good game. Kelley played splendidly behind for Bentley's very swift pitching. He is hard to beat in taking balls close off the bat, and watching his bases very closely. Marks put 13 men out on first. Arnold filled the position of second as it has never before been filled in that city, not making an error. Morrison and McCarton both fielded finely. Tipper was not in his usual trim, having a bad finger. Fields also was quite unwell, but did some fine fielding, notwithstanding. On the part of the Yales, Fowler, Barnes, Maxwell, Hazard and Starling did well in their respective positions. The score:—

The Mansfield will hear from first-class amateurs and professional clubs as soon as they wish to make up their list of games. They are now making arrangements for a fine inclosed ground, and all clubs who intend going through New England, are invited to call and give them a game. They have received a challenge from the Brown University, of Providence, R. I., to play in May, and will no doubt accept, the game to came off in Providence.

THE PROFESSIONAL CLUBS OF THE COUNTRY.

Below will be found a full list of the regular professional base ball clubs of the country which have completed their organizations for 1871. They are given in Alphabetical order:—

WHITE STOCKINGS vs. LONE STARS.

Our correspondent sends us the following detailed report of the game between the White Stocking Club and the noted Lone Stars, of the Crescent City, the result of which appeared in our issue of April 29d:—

All New Orleans was present at the return game played between these clubs on Sunday, the 16th inst., many persons being in attendance who were only brought out by the excitement and expectation that the southern boys would be able to get away with those from the west. The first game between these clubs, a month ago, when the score was 9 to 8 in favor of Chicago, was still the subject of conversation, and many deemed it certain (particularly as it was known that Jim Hennessey, late of the Southerns, had joined the Stars, and that he would appear in the game) that the White Stockings would be defeated. In this, however, they were disappointed, but that the game was the best ever played in New Orleans there is no doubt. Both clubs did their best, as the score will show. It is to be regretted, however, that, after a month's pleasant visit to the Crescent City, the stockings should have to leave with hard feelings against at least one of its citizens, and that the umpire. This gentleman's decisions were certainly very bad, perhaps about the worst ever seen in New Orleans, and that they injured the Stockings' chances is very certain, but I do not think they caused the loss of more than one run at the most. He was especially hard on Zetlein in his pitching, calling several balls when they certainly should have been strikes; but I think "the Charmer" erred in threatening to take the man off the ground if the umpire continued to give such decisions, not one of which were given with the intention of wilfully injuring the Stockings, but through ignorance, and excitement, the latter no doubt much augmented by several of the Chicagos growling at him. Every body on the ground was more or less excited, as the game was the sharpest ever witnessed in New Orleans, and had been so from the moment when play was called.

First Innings—McAtee, getting his base on called balls, was run out in trying to get to second by Tracy. King out on a fly taken by Wright. Hodes then batted a beauty to left field and made two bases, but was caught napping at that post by Hennessey. Condon retired at first, and Wright on a foul fly; Oby then got two bases, went to his third on a passed ball, and home on a muffed fly by Treacy, sent to him by Hastings, who got around to his third, where he was left by Tracy out at first by a splendid stop and throw by Pinkham to McAtee. Result of innings—Stockings, 0; Stars, 1.

2. Foley opened the innings by a safe base hit to right field, was sent to second by another safe hit made by Treacy in the same direction, Simmons having in the meantime gone out on a foul fly, handsomely taken by Wright. Duffy now took hold, and batting a daisy cutter to the left field, sent Foley home and Treacy to second. Pinkham got his first on called balls, when the Charmer, by a fine hit to left field, made his base, bringing home both Treacy and Duffy, Pinkham getting run out at second, McAtee striking out, leaving the Charmer on his base. The Stars, by errors on the part of Pinkham and Simmons, succeeded in getting three runs, made by Hennessey, Scott and Redon, Scott earning his base, as also did Condon, who was left by Wright and Oby, both going out at first by Simmons' assistance, the game standing:—Stars, 4; Stockings, 3.

3. This innings resulted in a blank for both nines; Zetlein, McAtee and King going out on foul bounds; Hastings ditto, Tracy at first, by Pinkham's help, and Leonard on a fly, taken by Simmons.

4. Hodes and Foley both retired on foul bounds, Simmons going to first on a missed three strikes, Treacey getting his first on called balls, Simmons, in the meantime, getting to third and home on a ball batted by Duffy, that should have been taken by Scott. Duffy, however, was retired at second by Condon's assistance, leaving Treacey at third..... Hennessey batted well, but by sharp play of Pinkham he retired at first. Scott then hit towards first, which McAtee muffed, Scott getting his base by his superior running, as also he did to second, going to third, and home on wild pitches. Redon retired at first, as also did Condon, the former by Pinkham's assistance, the latter by Simmons; the game standing 5 to 4 in favor of the Stars.

5. Both clubs drew another blank. Pinkham went out on a fly by Hennessey. Zetlein on a fly by Condon, McAtee at first by Leonard's help. Wright, for his side, at first, by the Charmer's assistance, Oby and Hastings on a fly, the former taken by Foley and the latter by Hodes, who, for this innings, played centre field, King going behind the bat.

6. King, by a fine hit over third, made his first. Hodes sent one to Scott, which that player muffed, King getting to second. Foley sent one up, which Tracy muffed, King getting to third, and Hodes to second. Simmons got his first on called balls. Treacy popped up a fly to Leonard, who made a muff of it for a double play, but becoming confused, instead of throwing it home to cut off King, he threw it wildly to second, King going home at once, and each runner advancing a base—no hand out. The umpire, however, decided Treacy out. This caused considerable commotion, the Stockings claiming that the decision was unjust, and it certainly was, for if Treacy was out on the fly, then those running bases were also out, the ball having been passed by the pitcher to the basemen. This the umpire refused to allow, and ordered the game to proceed. During the commotion Hodes managed to get in, and both Foley and Simmons advanced a base. Duffy sent up a fly, which Scott got. Pinkham, by a fine base hit, brought home both Foley and Simmons, but was himself retired at second by Zetlein sending a ball to Tracy, in time to cut off Pinky. Tracy then took hold of the ash to redeem, if possible, the errors made by himself and companions in the first part of the innings. He, however, got his base on missed strikes, and was caught at second by Hodes' throw to Simmons. Leonard hit finely for a base, but was run out by Duffy. Hennessey got a base by a good hit to centre field, but was caught at second by Duffy in trying to get too many bases, the score standing 8 to 5 in favor of the Stockings.

7. Zetlein batted a ball out to left field, which Wright went for, but missed, Scott getting it on the bound. The umpire, however, declared Zetlein out, which caused considerable growling, and the "charmer" commenced to pick up his bats and take his team off the field, but the better counsels of several of the officers of the club prevailed, and the game proceeded, McAtee retiring at first by a fine throw of Tracy's to Condon. King and Hodes both earned bases by fine hits to left and centre field; where, however, they were left by Foley going out at first by Hennessey's help—Scott and Redon both out on a foul fly. Condon, by a fine hit to right field, made his base, and was sent to second on Wright getting it given him. The balls in this case should have been called strikes, Oby then sent up a fly to Foley, who muffed it, which brought Condon home and advanced Wright to third, he subsequently getting home on a passed ball, just in time as Hastings was immediately after fled out by Pinkham. Score of the game—Stockings, 8; Stars, 7.

8. This was another blank for both sides. Simmons was out at first by Wright to Condon, Treacy on a foul bound taken by Hastings, and Duffy on a foul fly by Condon..... On the part of the Stars, Tracy, after having been severely hurt by a ball direct from Zetlein striking his person, batted a weak ball to Duffy and was retired at first. Leonard then got his base by a good hit to centre, but was left at second by Hennessey and Scott, both going out at first, the former by Pinkham and the latter by Simmons.

9. Pinkham, after getting his first by called balls, managed to get all the way round, and thus added another run to the Chicago score, as Zetlein was retired at first by Tracy's help. McAtee, after earning his first, got to second and third, but was caught at the home plate by Wright's sharp play to Hastings. King was forced out at second, after earning his base, by Hodes batting almost in Tracy's hands at short..... The Stars had now to get two runs to tie the game and three to win it, but fate was against them, Redon going out at first by Duffy's sharp play, Condon on a fly by Foley, and Wright ditto by Zetlein. The following is the score:—

ATHLETIC vs. HAYMAKERS.

On Tuesday, April 18th, the Athletic Club, of Brooklyn, took boat for Troy, and on Wednesday, the 19th, played an opening practice match with the Haymakers. The weather was anything but pleasant, yet so eager were the Trojans to see their crack nine take the field, that when the game began there must have been some twelve or fifteen hundred people present. The Athletics had to leave town minus the services of their catcher and short stop, and, besides that, without any preliminary practice in the field, thus being in no condition to do themselves justice or to cope with such a powerful team as the new nine of the Haymakers. The Haymakers were also unprepared to do themselves credit, from lack of preliminary practice, therefore, under the circumstances both clubs did well, the contest proving to be quite interesting after the first innings, in which the Haymakers scored ten runs through the bad play of the third baseman of the Athletics. After this, however, and for the remainder of the game, it was a contest well worth witnessing, being short, close and decisive. It was the first appearance of the Athletics together this season. The playing of the Haymakers was excellent under the circumstances, and they all did well considering the state of the weather, and it being the first game they had played together. Flynn, at r. f., made one of his splendid low running catches; and once, when a ball was batted to him on the ground, he picked it up, threw it to home plate, where it was nicely caught by McGeary, and the man running from third to home was put out, a splendid one throw and an excellent catch. Pike, at first, and Bevens, at second, proved themselves to be the right men in the right place—in fact, as they all did well, it would not be fair to praise one in particular more than other. The Athletics proved themselves to be true ball players. On the start they had some hard luck, but it did not seem to make them very shakey. Their batting was good, but the fielding was not so good in comparison. The Haymakers intend visiting New York on next Tuesday, and playing the Athletics, of Brooklyn, on Tuesday, the 25th, and Atlantics, on the 26th. The score:—

UNION vs. STAR, OF CAMBRIDGE.

On Wednesday, 19th inst., the Unions of Cambridge, N. Y., played the first of a series of practice games with the Stars, defeating them by a score of 18 to 13, in a well played game of ten innings. The Unions were minus the services of Button, but his place was admirably filled by G. Fenton, Gilbreath going to centre field, and George taking his home position at left. The Unions have been making some new additions to their nine the past week, and have secured the services of Roswell Rice and Orville Warn, of the Orions of Salem, and Vet Pratt, of the Riverside, of Arlington. ATHLETIC vs. EXPERT.

On the afternoon of Wednesday, the 19th inst., the leading professional and amateur organizations of the Quaker City, the Athletics and Experts engaged in a friendly contest for the superiority, on the grounds at Twenty-fifth and Jefferson streets. The attendance was not very large, owing to the fact that the weather was very unpropitious. The Athletics mustered their full strength, but the Experts had to find substitutes for two of their regular nine, which they did in the persons of Weaver and Hauge. The Experts took the lead at starting, scoring six runs on the first innings, but the Athletics on the fourth innings assumed the lead, which they maintained throughout, finally winning by a score of 32 to 15. The Athletics failed to play as well as expected, and the fielding of the Experts was much below their usual mark. The batting was excellent, Radcliff, Malone and Meyerle, of the Athletics, and Weaver, Luff and McLean, of the Experts, especially distinguishing themselves in the use of the ash. Sensenderfer made two magnificent running fly-catches, one of which, a backward jumping single-handed catch, was as fine a bit of fielding as was ever witnessed. McKenna, of the Experts, caught a very sharp liner from the bat in brilliant style at first base. These were the most noteworthy features of this game. The score:—

Introductory Overture.

MONDAY, April 24th, '71.

MAY we suggest, in view of the recent dramatic situations and sensational tableaux witnessed in our Legislative halls at Albany, that our theatrical managers might make a ten strike by producing a play embodying the principal characters and most salient features of the performances which took place up the river during the past few weeks. What have our dramatists been about that they did not see this rare chance for getting up one of the most telling plays of the age? A very effective scene could have been introduced, representing brothers Irving and Wood in an exposition of the science of manual defence—and these artistic characters might have been impersonated by Messrs. Mace and Coburn, which would have insured the success of the drama from the start. The plots and counter plots—the mining and undermining—the bribing and selling—the base—the vicious—the cash of the metropolis—the fierce struggle between the contending forces—the midnight cuncus—the one man needful—the last effort—the still small voice—"Eureka"—triumph of the Boss, and salvation of the city—all might be harmoniously strung together in suitable dialogue, with new and elaborate accessories, tricks, traps, flip flaps, rope walking, etc., the whole forming one of the greatest and most absorbing dramatic treats ever brought to the notice of a virtuous people. It is not too late yet. Why, immense sums of money could be realized solely by exhibiting Mr. Winans, the self-sacrificing republican, in this great democratic stronghold. We leave the hint to be acted upon by those interested.....Talking about plays, a friend of ours calls our attention to the fact that "one Mr. Shakespeare, a no writ some rather clever Irish historical tragedies, would, had he lived until yesterday, April 23, have been dead just three hundred and seven years;" which, upon referring to the record, we find to be correct, the immortal bard shuffling off his mortal coil on the 23d of April, 1616, in the 53d year of his age, "and his works do live after him"..... While rummaging and going through "Our Jim's" private papers this morning, we came across many curious curiosities of literature, evidently written by that youth under some very strong emotion, such as beer or love. The boy's thoughts seem to run in every channel—at one moment he is morose, self-willed and quarrelsome—at another time he is all tenderness and gentleness—then again he revels in the most distressing flights of morbid fancy—as witness the appended villainous concoction:—

THE MURDRER'S DUMB.

BY "OUR JIM."

From a fist insted of a flying trap pase,
A rope with a not was formed—
That thare murdrer's hed into it was stuk,
And the brake wez ack performed.

The young villain must have been struggling under some great sting of conscience when he penned such a wicked epigram, but there is something quite different, which goes to show his versatility of talent. The subject is

LUV.

A ESSA BY "OUR JIM."

Sum pursens acks different wen thare in luv, uthers dursent; I nu I chap boom got crazy—another fule drownedid hissel 3 times afore he got kured of it—I call that beestiesuius; then thare was wun dam frord boom got into luv wun da and went to lor the nex da to git out of it—such chaps ar to be depended on I dont think, and pepils boom hanker after luv had better shake em like tha wus lepers. Gurls is the best things to luv, I bleeve; I coodent never luv a boy like I cood a gurl, wether you bleeve it or no; gurls is more luvverbel, I think, expeshlly on munelis blue, wen tha gush ori over with it—tha orias like ise kreme and oischer suse—I never luv'd a gurl vii but I sune found out her strong pints wus witels and drink—jist as we'd git up to a confexshaner shop abede cert of squar in a nabor, and as—"Do ye like ise kreme?" jist like that. "But I never did kear for it, and ide as so. Then abede remarx:—"How do you like oischers best, stode or brled?" and shede as it was such a thing it made me go doun inter me trowsers pokits to turn if I had the price, wich, wunst in a wile, I diddent alwase hav, I bleeve. But I found out that luv and stuse gose together. One nite I wus seein a gurl home, out out of politeness—and she was a shorter, I tell ye—I never sene such a preity gurl in ori me igistinta, so I got in luv with her, and findin' I was possest of a half a dollar, I squose her hand, and sez:—"Do ye like smehers?" jist like gurls had dun to me afore. Yu never can tell how much ti off the dreful a she did:—"Hoom du ye insult? you sassy littel waggobone," sez she; "ide hav ye tu no I haint nun of sure strete warkers, yu durty lofer, yu." "I beg pure pardine, Miss," I replide, in a sofuss of tone wich surprised me, I think; "I haint no insulter, ni own muther wus a womman, and I hav been tort tu respex age and lame pepil," and with that bit of sarkasm I left the gald jade a standin in the middel of ise strete, a pre in hur own feelins. I cood hav squese our hands and smuthe a feller's cheker, and we don't think nuthin of it, but let wun of us du the same tu them, then tha cri out "insult." That is no sine of luv, I want yu tu no. The most cherefull a al enjoria in nater is tu git it by hurself: if the old fokes is bi it aint no yuse—tha spile sport alwase, sure. If yu snekseede in sesuin the linnur ise of the gurl's unwekim pe-rents, lede her gentle by the hand in green fields and pastures nu; if a pur in streme meanders by, let it purl, so much the better; if a wide spreddin oak sheds hur numeris foliege over yure yutheful heds, let hur sured; softly sete yure friend gasel on tu the dryest spot she is on, and then throw yure self down on the other side of hur, take hur hand into yure left dook, wile yure rite orkshineer, twined like a ivy round hur waste, drors hur towards a purace until hur purple form leeves the frale suppors of that old oax tree, and reklines her hole wate, a it ware, agin yure wildly heevin buzzum. If yu both hav it bad, if it has struk in, like the measels, yu kin sit there, jist in that thare persishin, all nite, without pain, pursh her villanous old pa-rent up a raceful brothers durseni cum onter yu like a shafe into her husband, some thare yu into the suggling strew, which wunst or twice, I beleeve, I hav tu ely, "kapoind unto me, I am surprised to say. Sum and after study xpram thare in in inocense and harmonie—the muddy orter tre. San Fra the upiurnd heds of thare luvvers, hoom is se rennadis of 'em, uthers hav bin noan to snil akaidin hot worter on tu the objecks of thare affekshine, and wun gurl hoom I chanse to cum across in me pilanic wekshin of ise nater I fell into a pertikel fit tu save her from the assaults of thevvin hibinders, ackshilly had the menesse to dash a hole bottil of oil of witirel onta me pursson, from wich I suffered ori the agnies of the damned, so to spek. I never went after her again, I bet yu. Tu sum it orl up into a alepice, luv durzent always pa, and them hoom havvent a welth of menes better kepe out of her treps, if he dursent want his hed punsht, I gess. This is ori what I no about luvvin, and it's cost me a dam site of experis to lurn it. Yours, "OUR JIM."

.....We are going to give you a little puzzle in the shape of rhymes, trusting that you may suffer no inconvenience in your idle efforts to solve the seeming mystery, and that your temper may not be ruffled should you fail to unravel this deep and intricate problem which we shall shortly place before you. This difficult and ingenious literary effusion, though simple in construction, cost us much labor, which might have been devoted, with more profit, to other purposes; but, sous cerrons, as the erudite and eccentric Monsieur Tonson would say; let us drop all metaphor and come to our

DRAMATIC PUZZLE.

Respectfully Submitted to the Elucidation of the Ladies and Gentlemen of the Show Profession.

Behold me! of our actors and their art
The foremost, altho' 'tis passing strange,
I am but second in each varying part;
And more remote within dramatic change
Assist I greatly he who deals most
Our tragic roles—Prince Hamlet and Macbeth,
Whole of myself, as part of each, exact,
Unknown in life, I am quite mute in death.
No prime donne could strike at all,
Save for my help, tho' of her I'm the last.
I'm constant in each gay and vocal hall,
And, absent from the present, share the past.
The graceful dancer owes a part
For were I not, oh! where were she?
The clown may pass me by, tho' in agility
I take the lead, and life's achievements crown.
I'm known to Harnouin and Panialoon,
To all the Gaffar Grays as well,
But not to Columbine, nor to the "spoon"
Who waits upon her with the tripling "swell."
Beauties be withering of the ballet, too,
I'm part of each, and in each do appear.
Their mere garments give me place, 'tis true,
And silence I with them all, both far and near.
Ye darkie vocalists, in yon I own
A double sway; your sayings, smart and quaint,
Have something of myself—the songs you drone,
Your many smiles, and your sable paint.
The circus knows me not, nor horse nor rope,
Which all our people do so hugely please;
Tho' in the arena I'm the full scope,
And take my place upon the grand trapeze.

Now, friends, the answer to this puzzle is as well known to us as you are, beloved readers, but we are not going to make any revelation at present much to your disgust. When you know as much about this little contrivance as we know, you will exclaim "how very simple!" But we know, you will exclaim "how very simple!" But whether that remark will apply to the author or the answer, we are not prepared to state. Sumnum bonum, si sit wall.....Class in geography, stand up:—"What did Moses say to the Red Sea when he wanted it to roll back that he might escape from Pharaoh?" "Told it to dry up." "Very well; why did the Red Sea go back upon the pursuer?" "Because he wouldn't pay his fare, oh!" "What did the Viceroy of Egypt say to Mr. Lesseps when the latter failed to pay up?" "He said he would sue his canal." "Why is Mrs. Davenport-Lander like the planet Venus?" "Because she is a star of the first magnitude." "Why is a leading stock actress like the planet Mars?" "Because she is a fixed star." "Correct! Why is a great actress who puts a bullet into her lover like a meteor?" Because she is a shooting-star." "When may a lover be said to be among the constellations?" "When he's in the milky way." "Keno!" "Correct."..... And now, to close this strange, uneventful budget of that nonsense which is said to be relished by the best of men, we will give our own impressions of

YE IRISH COMEDIAN.

In antiquated hat and coat
He bursts upon our view;
He'll take a "horn," or smoke a pipe,
And dance a horapipe, too;
He finds the sorrows of his land
A never failing creed—
'Twould be a dreadful thing for him
If Ireland should be freed.
He's full of life and jollity,
The merriest of rogues;
His dialect is like his shoes,
For both are known as "brogues;"
Whoever "treads upon his soul"
Will surely meet their fate,
For when he's his satisfaction's fight
His satisfaction's great.
He'll sing about old Erin's isle,
And of her turfy fires;
His pratie is of the Irish "fruit,"
For "pratie" he admires;
'Tis he who saves the fair Colleen
From dread destruction's jawa,
And sends the curtain whirling down
Amid "immense applause."
He almost always pleases, yet
There's nothing strange in that,
Because in every thing he does
You're sure to find him "Pat."
Long may he lighten all our hearts
With many a sunny gleam,
And may the circle of his friends
A "Fairy Circle" seem.

City Summary.

THE NEW AMERICAN DRAMA, "Plack," by T. C. de Leon, and announced upon the programmes as a comedy, was acted for the first time at Lina Edwin's Theatre on Monday evening, April 17th, with the cast as published in our pavi issue. It is in four acts, and the action is laid in the coal mining regions of western Pennsylvania. The drama is not very well adapted to so small a stage. On the first night the curtain did not rise until a quarter before nine o'clock, which had a tendency to slightly rufile the temper of the auditors, and the waits between the acts were necessarily somewhat prolonged. The sceneries were freshly painted and the various set pieces were in keeping. Its plot has little of novelty to recommend it, all of the incidents having been used in various forms many times before. After the first night the pruning-knife was liberally used and the drama acted more compactly and was, on the whole, more effective. Speaking of it as the early work of a native author it deserves encouragement, although it is far from being a finished production, a more intimate knowledge of dramatic effect and situations being desirable upon the author's part ere he can hope to excel. We think he possesses the elements of success, and, with study, observation and persistent effort he may yet achieve the acme of his wishes. Non-success should not discourage him, but rather be regarded as the chastening fire which eventually will burn away the dross and at last the pure metal will appear refulgent. It is not our need to detail the story of the drama at the present time. Mr. George Clarke had a bad part to play, if we except two telling situations, the first of which was, however, somewhat overdrawn, and therein was the inexperience of the author most apparent. We allude to the scene where, becoming aware of the nefarious designs of the villain Van Kraupt against the property of the father of the girl he loves, he foils them almost at the very moment of success, and compels Van Kraupt to sign a confession of his infamy; the other, his heroic descent into the mine filled with choke damp, to rescue the suffocating miners. Mr. Clarke made as much of the part, perhaps, as it was possible for any artist to do. Mr. T. E. Morris played a conventional father who had little to do, but was correct and pulpable. Mr. Mark Bates gave satisfaction as Eddie Moore. Mr. G. C. Boniface acted the villain, Van Kraupt, very artistically, being one of the best portrayed characters in the entire drama. He was cool, polished in manner, and his villainy was well masked. Mr. Sol Smith's make up for Ephraim Skew was a picture and his acting of the character was excellent, the idiosyncrasies of the character being well maintained throughout, although we doubt if such a person ever existed off the dramatic stage, but the author must bear the responsibility of that. Mr. Harry Eytinge re-appeared, after some few years absence from the boards, and acted Davie Dodd, a Cornish miner. The character was rather vigorously acted, with a tendency to rant, yet on the whole may be pronounced effective. This he pleaded his illness as an excuse for, and he received applause more than once. Mr. Eytinge evidently possesses dramatic ability of no mean order, and we trust that his services may in the future be retained in this city. Mr. H. Cook had but little to do as the semi-idiotic Luke, but was effective. Miss Ione Burke, as Kate Moore, displayed no signal ability. She read her lines understandingly, nothing more. Mrs. A. Bonifacio displayed considerable emotion for her acting of the somewhat aged belle Melissa Skew, which would have been much enhanced had her facial appearance been more in consonance with the requisite age—forty years. Miss Lillie Eldridge, as Agnes Dodd, portrayed that young, confiding girl with much tenderness and fidelity to nature. This young lady is making rapid progress in her profession. Evidently of careful, studious habits, possessing a pretty face, a lovely figure and a melodious voice, she invests all the characters she impersonates with a touching interest which quickly wins the sympathies of the audience. These qualifications found full scope for their display in the character above named, which rendered it peculiarly attractive and interesting. The remaining minor characters above flailed, which rendered it peculiarly attractive and interesting. The remaining minor characters, who had little or nothing to do, did so considerate posing and action to accomplish, did-so with credit. The orchestra at this theatre, under the leadership of Mr. William Withers, deserves more than a passing notice. Mr. Withers performed nightly during the past week a violin solo which was heartily applauded.

AT NIBLO'S GARDEN on Monday evening, April 17th, Conly Calhern's version of "Richard III" was substituted for the version of that tragedy by Charles Calbert, which had been acted the previous week. Mr. Neil Warner acted Richard, vice Mr. James Bennett, who appeared for the last time on April 15th. The sceneries and costumes that had been used in the previous version were used in the present one, and the murder scene of Clarence was also retained. The changes in the cast were as follows:—Theodore Hamilton played Richmond; Mr. Wilbur Hinnerald, Tressel; C. H. Morton, King Henry VI.; and Miss Caroline Carson, Elizabeth, instead of Mme. Ponisi, as was announced in our past issue. Owing to the absence of Mr. L. R. Shewell, who was called to Philadelphia by the death of his mother, the character of Buckingham was acted for a portion of the past week by Mr. L. Tilson. Mr. Neil Warner on each appearance as Richard. His voice was husky, being at times quite indistinct, as though he was suffering from a cold or a severe bronchial affection. His acting lacked light and shade and the subtleties of the character were not clearly developed. There are few men who can play Richard so that it would be accounted a great piece of acting. The business of the past week has been light, and as apparently the management is compelled to close this tragedy upon the boards for some little time to come, why could not the cast be changed two or three times a week. There are three artists in the present cast, Messrs. Shewell, Levick and Hamilton, who could play Richard acceptably, and possibly might do more than that, and curiosity to see them in this role might improve the business.

THE RE-APPEARANCE OF MISS KITTY O'NEIL and the continuation of the engagement of Miss Emma Alford and Sydney Franks constituted what might be termed the stellar attraction at Tony Pastor's during the past week. As we have so recently written upon the merits of these performers nothing now is to be said, save that they were received with a greeting that, for him, at which their popularity is by no means diminished. Johnny Wild and Frank Kerns re-appeared in the song and dance entitled "Golden Showers," which was favorably received. A Chinese dance by Miss Amelia Gorenfio, a song and dance by Cummings, a dance by Miss Helene Smith and the songs of Tony Pastor combined to make a very pleasing entertainment. "The Forty Female Jack Sheppards," with Tony Pastor as Blacken, was quite amusing.

MISS ROSA EVANS, a young actress, who has attracted much attention in San Francisco, Cal., where she played a highly successful engagement after her arrival in that city from Australia, and afterwards played with like success in Sacramento, Virginia City, Salt Lake and Kansas City, arrived in this city during the past week. We trust she may appear at one of our theatres.

THE COMPLIMENTARY BENEFIT to Mr. and Mrs. Barney Williams prior to their departure for Europe on May 3d, for a lengthened absence abroad, which in a late issue we spoke of as being in preparation, has on account of the Academy of Music being engaged for opera, been abandoned. A testimonial from our leading citizens will, however, be given them in the form of a banquet at Delmonico's, at which Mayor Hall will preside.

THE COMPANY OF JAPANESE now performing at the San Francisco Minstrel Hall are doing a very fair business. To many of our citizens and the host of strangers who at this season of the year make their annual pilgrimage to this city, their feats are novel. The powers of endurance of some of these performers are truly startling, and the novelties of the past week were the "Butterfly act;" the "Magic act" and the "Incubation Feat." Matinees are given by this company on Wednesdays and Saturdays.

AT THE GLOBE THEATRE during the past week the Kiraly troupe and the Hernandez pantomime company appeared in a ballet pantomime, entitled the "Pearl of Tokay." El Nino Eddie performed some daring feats on the tight rope. Gaston, the "Fire King," placed not unobstances in his mouth and drank liquids at a high temperature, and among other numerous acts may be mentioned Weaver and Son in their specialties; Kimie, in Dutch songs; Frank Clark, banjo solos; Little Vic, songs with quick changes of costume, and Quilter and Goodrich in songs and dances.

JAMES THOMPSON, the excellent property man connected with Wallack's Theatre, died on April 23d, in the 48th year of his age. He had been connected with Wallack's Theatre for many years, both in its present location and when at the corner of Broadway and Broome street. That he was a master of his art was clearly evinced by the excellence of the "appointments" ever witnessed upon the stage of that theatre. He was much respected by those with whom he came in contact, and his death will be sincerely mourned by a large circle of relatives and friends, especially by his widow and family of several children. His funeral will take place on Wednesday, April 26th, from St. Ann's church, in 12th street, between 3d and 4th avenues.

THE LAST WEEK OF THE SEASON at the Theatre Comique will be the present. During the past week the only novelty offered was Harry Jackson, who acted several characters in a protean farce founded upon "A Day after the Fair." His imitation of Fechter was fair, but that of Charles Kean was bad. His impersonation of the "Heathen Chinee" was not a success. The balance of the programme consisted of a variety of pleasing acts, which were well performed. Signora Bonifacio during the present week will be devoted to benefits, upon which occasions both afternoon and evening performances will be given. Monday Mons. La Thorne, the stage manager, presents a large array of volunteer talent for his benefit; on Tuesday Hughey Dougherty will do the same; on Wednesday the genial and courteous treasurer, Mr. Zimmerman, presents his name to the public, and on Thursday David Braham, the excellent leader of the orchestra, will have a benefit.

JOHNNY THOMPSON closed his engagement at the Bowery Theatre on Saturday evening, April 22d. "On Hand" continued on the bills during the week. This evening, April 24th, another aspirant for dramatic fame, from the minstrel boards, Mr. Johnny Allen, will commence an engagement, appearing in a drama which had been written expressly for him, entitled "Schneider."

MME. JANAUSCHEK sailed for Europe on April 22d. It is said that she will return to this country in the fall, and resume her starring engagements.

MR. WALTER MONTGOMERY returned to the city from Boston, Mass., during the past week

NEWCOMB AND ARLINGTON'S NEW MINSTREL HALL, on Twenty-eighth street in close contiguity to Broadway, was formally inaugurated on Monday evening, April 17th. The proprietors are W. W. Newcomb and Wm. Arlington, both performers of excellent repute, who have been before the public for many years. J. H. Surridge is the interlocutor, and Charles Reynolds and Wm. Arlington are the end men. In the first part there were sixteen performers, among them the following instruments were used:—three violins, one flute and piccolo, one cornet, one clarionet, one double bass and a guitar. As a matter of record we print the entire

The auditorium, which presents a neat and cheerful appearance, is divided into a parquet, parquet circle and gallery or dress circle, the entrances which are upon a level with the side walk are capacious; the seats in the auditorium are the patent iron folding chairs, upholstered with red enamelled cloth, and are very wide and comfortable. There is one main aisle running through the centre of the parquet, to which there are also entrances on either side near the stage. The frequent occurrence of aisles in the parquet circle affords easy facilities for seating the audience with comfort. On either side of the stage is a private box elegantly carpeted; the appointering being of crimson satin and rich lace. The stage is likewise supplied with several sets of scenery and a chastely ornamented act drop marks the various divisions in the programme. The frescoing of the auditorium is not yet completed, but, judging from those portions that are finished, it will be rich and ornate in design and the colors brilliant without being gaudy. The aisles are carpeted with cocoa matting, and the declination of the floor from the entrance to the stage is such that an excellent view of the performance is afforded every auditor. The performance, making due allowance for the fact that the performers had recently been brought together for the first time, was a good one. The instrumentation was excellent, and the choruses were well sung. J. H. Surridge, a tenor, sang "When the Corn is Waving," with good effect. Charles Reynolds, in a comic ditty, "Hannah Maria's Brother," displayed no possession of a good voice and considerable musical culture by his singing of "Erin Asthore;" William Arlington sang "The Poultry Show" with imitations of roosters, chickens, etc., so well that he was thrice encored. Charles Henry's pleasing tenor voice was heard to advantage in "Darling Little Daisey." In the second part the burlesque of the Ninth Regiment band was quite a success. The performers were in military cape, red coats and black pants, and discoursed sweet music from brass instruments. W. W. Newcomb was quite successful in caricaturing the movements of a musical conductor. W. Henry Rice as a burlesque prima donna was thrice encored, in response to one of which he sang the "Old Folks at Home," in imitation of Mlle Nilsson, which was received with much favor; Harry Stanwood played an air very effectively upon a tow fiddle; Hammond played a solo upon the cornet, which required much skill to execute, and W. W. Newcomb performed a solo upon two mouth harmonicons. In part third the statue clog dance by Masters Willie and Tommy was remarkable for rapidity of execution and excellence of time. They were deservedly encored. William Arlington, in his sketch, "Through by Daylight"—Reynolds and Stanwood—kept the audience in a roar of laughter by his grotesque evolutions in a Scotch strathspey. Reynolds and Stanwood were funny in the sketch "Through by Daylight." The song and dance by Charley Walters, entitled the "Water Nymph," was one of the most prominent features of the programme. This performer, besides being a good singer and dancer, possesses a degree of acrobatic skill seldom witnessed upon the minstrel stage. His somersault on to and backward throwing a backward somersault with ease performs a number of acrobatic feats which it is impossible to describe. A triple encore rewarded his efforts to please. Harry Stanwood most favorably impressed the audience by his bon mots and banjo playing with comic songs. The company is a good one, and the performances will undoubtedly improve as the members become accustomed to each other. The jokes and funny sayings in the first part were novel and fresh, and we think this cosy little hall, so excellently situated, will become a permanent institution of popular resort.

NO CHANGE OCCURRED at the Olympic Theatre during the past week, the sensational drama entitled "Horizon" having been played to medium sized audiences.

OLIVER DOUD BYRON closed his engagements at Wood's Museum on April 22d, and the sensational drama of "Across the Continent" was then acted for the last time there. The engagement has been a successful one, both drama and artist giving full satisfaction to the audiences. At the usual matinees, save Saturday, the farce entitled "Turn Him Out" and the drama of the "Flying Dutchman," who last performed, Gerald Francis Train delivered his second lecture there on Sunday evening. The attendance during the past week has been good.

THE SEASON AT THE FOURTEENTH STREET THEATRE terminated somewhat abruptly after the performance of Tuesday evening, April 18th. On Monday evening Miss Laura Keene appeared in "Hunted Down," which had proved quite successful at Brooklyn Theatre recently, and it was hoped that it might pull up the business, but the attendance was quite limited, and being still less on the following evening, it was deemed prudent to terminate the season at once. Mr. William Creswick closed his engagement there on April 15th. Miss Laura Keene and the dramatic company which had been playing there, go upon a tour of the neighboring cities.

MR. WILLIAM NIBLO, died in this city on April 20th of dropsy, from the effects of which disease he had been confined to his residence for the past two years. He was born in Bath, Eng., in May, 1825, and made his debut in this country at the Astor Place Opera House as one of the singing witches in "Macbeth" in 1849. He subsequently was engaged by William Niblo as prompter and afterwards as stage manager at Niblo's Garden, in which he remained for many years, in fact until Mr. Niblo retired from business. In 1859 he went to Europe with J. M. Nixon and engaged Cooke's Royal Circus, which performed in this country at Niblo's Garden, and during that period of time he was manager for Mr. Nixon. For some years afterwards he was disengaged. During the season of 1867 he again entered into active employment, and was engaged that season as stage manager at the Arch Street Theatre in Philadelphia, Pa. At one time he was the traveling business agent for Mr. and Mrs. Barney Williams, and when Mr. Williams purchased, from Mr. George Wood, the Broadway Theatre at the corner of Broome street and Broadway, Mr. Moore was duly installed as the manager, which position he continued to occupy until the house was converted into stores. Shortly after this he was taken so ill that he was confined to his house, and with the exception of very brief intervals so continued till his demise. The expenses of his illness, combined with the pecuniary outlay for his household, soon made sad havoc with what little store of money he had laid by, and being in distress Mr. Barney Williams came to his aid in a generous manner, by which a large number of prominent artists, including both Mr. and Mrs. Williams, volunteered their services. This netted him upwards of two thousand dollars. After this became exhausted we happen to know that Mr. Williams gave him a regular weekly allowance, and that many presents from the kind hearted Mrs. Williams found their way to his home. The widow and six children are left in straitened circumstances, and we doubt not, a benefit will shortly be arranged for their temporary relief. His funeral took place on Monday, April 24th, from his residence, 184 East Twelfth street, to St. Joseph's Church, in the receiving vault of which the remains were temporarily deposited.

AT BRYANTS' MINSTRELS some few changes were made in the programme during the past week. In the first part D'Alberte's fine baritone voice was heard to excellent advantage in "Softly O'er the Rippling Waters." Dave Reed sang "Rackerty Jack;" H. Norman sang with taste and feeling "Maudie Moore;" and W. F. Stanley, with due effect, "Come where the Moonbeams Linger." In the second part, Dan Bryant and Dave Reed vied for superiority in Terpsichorean movements in a humorous act entitled "The Challenge Dance." Little Mac and McAndrews performed some burlesque Japanese acrobatic feats, and a new afterpiece called "All Among the Hay Boys," concluded the programme. Business has been fair.

AT BOOTH'S THEATRE, "Richelieu" was enacted on Monday, Tuesday, Friday and Saturday evenings, and on Thursday evening and Saturday matinee "The Fool's Revenge" was played. This theatre will be closed on Monday evening, April 24th, and on Tuesday the "Winter's Tale," for which the scenery has been a long time prepared, will be acted for the first time.

THE SEASON OF OPERA BOUFFE at the Grand Opera House is about drawing to a close. "La Belle Helene" was performed during the entire past week. On Thursday evening, Miss Elise Persini took her first benefit in America. Between the first and second acts of "La Belle Helene," she sang a new song entitled "AIXA," which had been composed expressly for her by M. Brunel, the words by Charles Vylis; also the "Jewel Song" from "Faust." On Sunday evening the sixteenth concert of Pike's 12th Ninth Regiment band took place, and the usual rehearsal matinee was given on Thursday.

MR. CHARLES MATHEWS performed at the Fifth Avenue Theatre during the past week in "Married for Money" and "Patter vs. Clatter." For the present week an entire change of programme will be given.

FOOTE'S COMEDY OF THE "LIAR" has made such a genuine success at Wallack's Theatre that it was performed during the past week save the Saturday matinee, when "The Captain of the Watch" and "His Last Legs" were acted. All other novelties which were ready for production have consequently been postponed for a time.

A BRIEF SEASON OF ITALIAN OPERA is announced to be given at the Academy of Music, commencing May 1st. The nights of performance will be Monday, Wednesday and Friday, and two performances will be given. Among the artists engaged are Signors Guiseppe Villani, tenore di forza; Enrico Caroselli, tenore di grazia, and Signora Laura Himela, primo contralto, of the "Havana Opera Company;" and the following artists who are well known here:—Miss Clara Louise Kellogg, Signora Frederici and Mme. Agath States, prima donnas soprano; Signora Orsini, Reina and Laurence, barritones; Signora Sanini Bascell, basso; Signor Fontanesi, comprimario, and Signor Nicolao, conductor. The repertoire will consist of the "Sicilian Vespers," "Faust," "Poliuto" "Rigoletto," "Martha," "Il Crispino," "Un Ballo in Maschera," "Robert le Diable" and "Ernani."

COL. T. A. BROWN, drama'ic agent, 718 Broadway, is prepared to negotiate engagements for the following artists and troupes:—Little Neil, "The California Diamond," with her sensational drama of "Katy Did;" Little Vic, child actress, who is assisted by her mother, Virginia Smith; E. T. Stetson, who appears in the sensational drama of "Neck and Neck;" the Kiralfy Ballet Troupe; Gus Wilhams, comic vocalist; Nat Hyams, for first comedy, and the Imperial Japanese Troupe. Any person having a trained horse can find a purchaser by addressing Mr. Brown, and a gentleman is wanted to furnish cash for a lady star.

T. CAHILL AND T. W. KEENE sail for Europe the first week in June.

MISS FANNY BURT, an actress of repute and popularity in the west, arrived in the city during the past week.

AN AMATEUR DRAMATIC PERFORMANCE is to be given at the Union League Theatre on Wednesday evening, April 26th, for the benefit of a family in great distress. The father of the family was formerly in the employ of a well known mercantile house in this city, and was by accident disabled

BASE BALL.

PENNSYLVANIA BASE BALL ASSOCIATION.

A special meeting of this association was held on Tuesday evening, April 18th, at A. J. Reach's, at which time the following resolutions were offered by Mr. John J. Rogers, and were adopted with but one dissenting voice. The resolutions led to an animated discussion, in which Messrs. Rogers and Kerns, of the Atalentic, took a important part. The following are the resolutions:—

Whereas, On March 16th and 17th, 1871, there convened in the city of New York, two conventions, which culminated in the creation of two organizations, entitled respectively the "National Association of Amateur Base Ball Players," and the "National Association of Professional Base Ball Players," which, according to the declarations of their severa officers, superceded and dissolved the "National Association of Base Ball Players," and

Whereas, It is due to the base ball fraternity that some public official d aeroval of these declarations should be given by the officers and members of the said National Association of Base Ball Players, therefore

Resolved, By the Pennsylvania State Association, that

1. The National Associa ion is composed of state associations and of individual clubs in states where there are not sufficient clubs to form associations.

2. That, therefore, clubs belonging to state associations cannot, by any individual action, withdraw from the National Association of Base Ball Players, but must first resign from or sever their connection with state associations in the usual legal and prescribed manner.

3. That it is folly to suppose, much more to declare, that the action of the Olymbic Club of Philadelphia, in joining the National Association of Amateur Base Ball Players, and of the Athletic Club, of Philadelphia, in becoming members of the National Association of Professional Base Ball Players, could either impair the status or rights of the forty-six (46) other clubs belonging to the Pennsylvania State Association, or even dissolve their connection with the National Association of Base Ball Players.

4. That a copy of these resolutions be transmitted to the secretaries of the three national associations, and that they be published in the New York Clipper and Philadelphia Sunday Mercury.

It seems to us that the action of this association in this matter is unnecessary. There is no doubt that the National Association has year by year been losing its influence over the clubs of the country, and the proceedings of November last were sufficient to prove to any one that it could no longer exist under the auspices which controlled its legislation on that occasion. The business of legislating in the interests of the fraternity at large has been governed by influences which have brought about just such a condition of things as exist at present; and we question whether anything could be done to improve upon the present state of the association now in existence. For instance—the twelve professional clubs of the country have a national association of their own which legislates in the interests of that class specially. Then the amateurs have a National Association of their own, which answers every purpose of legislating for the benefit of that class of ball players. Then there are the several state base ball associations, which are now independent organizations, governing only such clubs as are located in each state the association belongs to. Of what use, therefore, is the association known as the late "National association?" None whatever. The Pacific association, the Louisiana association, and other state and sectional associations, have hitherto existed independent of the national Association, and they can still do so. The fact is, our country is too large, and is composed of too many sections having different climates, peoples and customs for one single association to rule it; and experience has shown that the system of state associations existing on an independent footing is the only system likely to be permanent. Therefore, we hope to see the clubs of the Pacific slope governed entirely by a Pacific association; the clubs of the west by a western amateur association, or by their individual state associations; the southern, northern and eastern clubs the same. By this means every club in the country will become amenable to control, and an 'association club" and by no other means can they be, that we can see at present.

In only one thing is it necessary that they should be united as one body—and that is in regard to adopting a regular code of playing rules, which can be done by calling a convention of delegates from all base ball associations, state or sectional, to meet every two or three years to revise the rules. There should be no division on that point.

ECKFORD vs. CHELSEA.

The second practice game of the Eckford nine of Brooklyn, took place April 19th, on the Union grounds, and, as before, the weather was very unpleasant, rain falling before the game terminated. The opponents of the Eckfords were the Chelsea club nine, a crack junior organization of Williamsburgh, which last year won a ball from the Putnams, of Troy. They mustered a very strong team, their positions at first base, short field, catcher and pitcher being attended to in excellent style, their little stort-stop, Metcalfe, proving himself to be "a bully little player" as the boys called him; while Dehiman, at first base, played like a veteran. The Eckfords also turned out in full strength, and they anticipated getting rid of the Chelsea boys as easily as they had the Tony Pastors; but the Chelseas were not to be disposed of so cheaply, and before the third innings terminated, Martin realized the fact that he would have work to do to beat the juniors. But very few people were present, the crowd being gathered in the adjoining lot to see Barnum's great show. The game opened with the Eckfords at the bat, and their two first strikers were easily disposed of, and but for a wild throw, their third would have been; at any rate, they did not earn a run, though after escaping a whitewash they ran up a score of 5. On the other side the boys led off quite spiritedly, and by some excellent hits they punished Martin to the tune of three runs, which rather astonished the renowned pitcher. In the second innings the Eckfords were whitewashed in admirable style, Metcalfe, West and Dehiman making a beautiful double play, the boys showing themselves to be well posted in the points of the game. On the other side, by a high throw to 2d base, the Chelseas got one run, the side went to bat and the game stanaing at 5 to 4 only in favor of the Yellow Stockings. This was altogether a different condition of things from that laid out by the Eckfords in their programme of the game, and, consequently, the contest began to assume quite an interesting position. In the succeeding five innings, however, the Chelseas had to retire without adding a run to their score, Martin studying his batsmen well and pitching with his old effect. The Eckfords, on the other hand, found it no easy task to punish the Chelsea pitcher, they not earning a single run until their sixth innings, McCormack being capitally supported in the field. In the 8th innings the Eckfords woke up at the bat, and, being assisted by some loose fielding, they added seven runs to their score, and in their 7th innings they added three more. Of these five were earned, and that was the total of their earned runs in the game. In the last two innings the Chelseas batted well for five runs, a fine double play by Nelson being noteworthy. The final result was the success of the Eckfords by a score of 22 to 9, a good game under the circumstances. Rain began to fall as the 8th innings was commenced, and the umpire should have called the game five minutes after the rain began to fall, this being his imperative duty. But he was very lax in interpreting the rules, besides being entirely unacquainted with the new rules, for which, by the way, he is also excusable, Hayns having prevented umpires from getting posted in time. MANSFIELD vs. YALE COLLEGE NINE.

This game came off in Middletown, Ct., on April 15th, on the Mansfields' ground, before quite a crowd of people, considering the nature of the day, which was very cold and windy. The Yales were the challenging party. This being the first time the new nine of the Mansfield had come together, it was expected they would make many errors, but to the surprise of all they went in and played a good game. Kelley played splendidly behind for Kentley's very swift pitching. He is hard to beat in taking balls close off the bat, and watching his bases very closely. Marks put 13 men out on first. Arnold filled the position of second as it has never before been filled in that city, not making an error. Morrison and McCarton both fielded finely. Tipper was in his usual trim, having a bad finger. Fields also was quite unwell, but did some fine fielding, notwithstanding. On the part of the Yales, Foster, Baines, Maxwell, Hagard and Starling did well in their respective positions. The score:—

The Mansfield will hear from first-class amateurs and professional clubs as soon as they wish to make up their list of games. They are now making arrangements for a fine inclosed ground, and all clubs who intend going through New England, are invited to call and give them a game. They have received a challenge from the Brown University, of Providence, R. I., to play in May, and will no doubt accept, the game to came off in Providence.

THE PROFESSIONAL CLUBS OF THE COUNTRY.

Below will be found a full list of the regular professional base ball clubs of the country which have completed their organizations for 1871. They are given in Alphabetical order:—

Clubs.	Place Located.	Bases of Organization.
Atlantic	Brooklyn	Share gate money.
Athletic	Philadelphia	Pay players by salaries.
Boston	Boston	Stock company.
Chicago	Chicago	Stock company.
Eckford	Brooklyn	Share gate money.
Forest City	Cleveland	Pay players by salaries.
Forest City	Rockford	Share gate money.
Haymakers	Troy	Stock company
Kekiongas	Fort Wayne	Share gate money.
Mutuals	New York	Pay players by salaries.
National	Washington	Share gate money.
Olympic	Washington	Stock company.

Among the amateur clubs that will defray the expenses of their organization by sharing gate money on tours etc., are the Athletics and Stars of Brooklyn, the Harvards of Boston, Yale of New Haven, Expert of Philadelphia, Pastime of Baltimore, Amateur of Chicago, Cincinnati of Cincinnati, Lone Stars Robert E. Lees and Southerns of New Orleans, and the Earles of Louisville. Among the amateur clubs who do not share gate money at all are the Knickerbockers of New York, the Excelsiors, Harmonics and Osceolas of Brooklyn, the Equity and Olympics of Philadelphia, and the Fleetwood Club of Tremont.

WHITE STOCKINGS vs. LONE STARS.

Our correspondent sends us the following detailed report of the game between the White Stocking Club and the noted Lone Stars, of the Crescent City, the result of which appeared in our issue of April 22d:—

All New Orleans was present at the inaugural game played between these clubs on Sunday, the 16th inst., the press persons being in attendance who were only brought out by the excitement and expectation that the southern boys would be able to getaway with those from the west. The first game between these clubs, a month ago, when the score was 9 to 8 in favor of Chicago, was still the subject of conversation, and many deemed it certain (particularly as it was known that Jim Hennessey, late of the Southerns, had joined the Stars, and that he would appear in the game) that the White Stockings would be defeated. In this however, they were disappointed, but that the game was the best ever played in New Orleans there is no doubt. Both clubs did their best, as the score will show. It is to be regretted, however, that after a month's pleasant visit to the Crescent City, the Stockings should have to leave with hard feelings against at least one of its citizens, and that the umpire. This gentleman's decisions were certainly very bad, perhaps among the worst ever seen in New Orleans, and that they injured the Stockings' chances is very certain, but I do not think they caused the loss of more than one run at the most. He was especially hard on Zettlein in his pitching, calling several balls when they certainly should have been strikes; but I think "the charmer" erred in threatening to take the side of the ground if the umpire continued to give such decisions, not the one of which were given with the intention of wilfully injuring the Stockings, but through ignorance, and excitement, the latter no doubt being augmented by several of the Chicagoans growling at him. Everybody on the ground was more or less excited, as the game was the sharpest ever witnessed in New Orleans, and had been so from the moment when play was called.

First Innings.—McAtee, getting his base on called balls, was run out in trying to get to second by Tracy. King out on a fly ball by Wright. Hodes then obtained a base on a fair field and made two bases, but was caught napping at that post by Hennessey. Condon retired at first, and Wright out on foul fly; they then got two bases, went to his third on a passed ball, and scored on a muffed fly by Tracy, sent to him by Hastings. Tracy went to his third, where he was left by Tracy out at first by Hennessey's help—Scott also. Redon both out on a foul fly. Condon, by a fine hit to right field, made his base, and was sent to second on Wright getting it given him. The balls in this case should have certainly been strikes. Oby then sent up a fly to Foley, who muffed it, which brought Condon home and advanced Wright to third, he subsequently getting home on a passed ball, just in time as Hastings was immediately after filed out by Pinkham. Score of the game—Stockings, 8; Stars, 7.

8. This was another blank for both sides. Simmons went out at first by Wright to Condon, Treacy on a foul bound taken by Hastings, and Duffy on a foul fly by Condon. On the part of the Stars, Tracy, after having been severely hurt by a ball direct from Zettlein striking his person, batted a weak ball to Duffy and was retired at first. Leonard then got his base by a good hit to centre, but was left at second by Hennessey and Scott, both going out at first, the former by Pinkham and the latter by Simmons.

9. Pinkham, after getting his first by called balls, managed to get all the way round, and thus added another run to the Chicagos' score, as Zettlein was retired at first by Tracy's help. McAtee, after earning his first got to second and third, but was caught at the home plate by Wright's sharp play to Hastings. King was forced out at second, after earning his base, by Hodes batting almost in Tracy's hands at short. The Stars had now to get two runs into the game and three to win it, but fate was against them, Redon going out at first by Duffy's sharp play Condon on a fly by Foley, and Wright duo by Zettlein. The following is the score:—

ATHLETIC vs. HAYMAKERS.

On Tuesday, April 18th, the Athletic Club, of Brooklyn, took boat for Troy, and on Wednesday, the 19th, played an opening practice match with the Haymakers. The weather was anything but pleasant, yet so eager were the Trojans to see their crack nine take the field, that when the game began there must have been some twelve or fifteen hundred people present. The Athletics had to leave town minus the services of their catcher and short stop, and, besides that, without any preliminary practice in the field, thus being in no condition to do themselves justice or to cope with such a powerful team as the new nine of the Haymakers. The Haymakers were also unprepared to do themselves credit, from lack of preliminary practice, therefore, under the circumstances both clubs did well, the contest proving to be quite interesting after the first innings, in which the Haymakers scored ten runs through the bad play of the third baseman of the Athletics. After this, however, and for the remainder of the game it was a contest well worth witnessing, being short, close and decisive. It was the first appearance of the Athletics together this season. The playing of the Haymakers was excellent under the circumstances, and they all did well considering the state of the weather, and it being the first game they had played together. Flynn, at r. f., made one of his splendid low running catches; and once, when a ball was batted to him on the ground, he picked it up, threw it to home plate, where it was nicely caught by McGeary, and the man running from third to home was put out, a splendid line throw and an excellent catch. Pike, at first, and Be vens, at second, proved themselves to be the right men in the right place—in fact, as they all did well, it would not be fair to praise one in particular more than other. The Athletics proved themselves to be true ball players. On the start they had some hard luck, but it did not seem to make them very shakey. Their batting was good, but the fielding was not so good in comparison. The Haymakers intend visiting New York on next Tuesday, and playing the Athletics of Brooklyn, on Tuesday, the 25th, and Atlantics, on the 26th. The score:—

UNION vs. STAR, OF CAMBRIDGE.

On Wednesday, 19th inst., the Unions of Cambridge, N. Y., played the first of a series of practice games with the Stars, defeating them by a score of 18 to 13, in a well played game of ten innings. The Unions were minus the services of Button, but his place was admirably filled by G. Fenton, Gilfreath going to centre field, and George taking his home position at left. The Unions have been making some new additions to their nine the past week, and have secured the services of Roswell Rice and Orville Warn, of the Orions of Salem, and Vet Pratt, of the Riverside, of Arlington. ÆTNAS, OF CHICAGO.—This club, holding the silver ball emblems ic of the amateur championship of the Garden City, recently elected the following officers:—L. C. Williams, president; R. H. Yelverton, vice president; Frank Keefer, secretary; Samuel C. Ward, treasurer; P. Quinn, captain of the nine. The nine for the season will be the strongest ever placed in the field by the club and will consist of the following players:—Quinn, catcher; Reid, pitcher; Hamilton, short stop; Lynch, first base; Gillan, second base; Reynolds, third base; O'Laughlin, left field; Graves, centre field; Ward, right field, with Sweeney, Long and Hamilton as substitutes, either of whom can play a base or a field equal y well. The club is now ready for challenges. All communications should be addressed to Frank Keefer, secretary, care of Spalding and LaMonte, 114 Madison street. They lately played a game with a picked nine, composed of members of the Garden City, Amateur, Prairie, Athletic and Atlantic Clubs, of that city, winning the score of 27 to 6. They claim the title of amateur champions of the north west, and will be pleased to play games with any and all clubs visiting Chicago, promising a satisfactory division of gate receipts.

THE GAME IN CHICAGO.—The Chicago nine will employ the time at home prior to the arrival of the Washington Olympics, in May, by playing with the Cleveland, Rockford and Ft. Wayne clubs. They will have accomodations on their grounds to seat 6,500 people, and standing room for plenty more. With the single exception of its being somewhat narrow, they will have one of the finest ball parks in the country. The amateur clubs have commenced playing already. The principal clubs are the Æmas, Amateurs and Prairies, who all play a good game, besides the White Stocking Juniors, who think they can hold their own with any junior nine anywhere, and then there are at least twenty other organized clubs who play fair games. So they anticipate lively times in the Lake City.

ATHLETIC CLUB.—At a meeting of the Equity Club, of this city, it was decided to change its name to the "Dramatic Bulls Run Club. The following officers were elected for the ensuing season:—President, Mr. Wm. B. Freligh (manager of the Bowery Theatre); vice president, Mr. Geo. France; recording secretary, Mr. S. C. France; corresponding secretary, Mr. F. W Hofell; treasurer, Mr. Wm. Marden; directors, Mr. M. J. Oliver, Wm. Marden and H. Fisher. Mr. Maurice Moore and Mr. M. P. Dooley are also active members. Practice days, Tuesdays and Fridays at their grounds, Greenville. All communications should be addressed, Bowery Theatre, N. Y. city.

THE CONFIDENCE B. B. C., of New Rochelle, held a meeting on April 17th, and elected the following officers for the ensuing year:—President, M. J. Dillon; vice-presidents, E. C. Jessup and Thomas Brady; recording secretary, Richard Hanna; corresponding secretary, Thomas B. Hynes; financial secretary, Chas. Shanz; treasurer, Samuel P. Leeds; directors—Thomas Powers, John H. McGuirk, P. Morris, C. H. Merritt, C. Shanz, C. P. Kimball and John Hanna; delegates to Convention—M. J. Dillon and John M. Pollock; captain first nine, Thos. B. Hynes; scorer, Wm. Johnson; trustees—M. McNamee, Jr. and John Hanna.

THE FOREST CITY CLUB, OF CLEVELAND.—This club, having completed their arrangements for their eastern tour, now announce their official programme, as follows: Monday, June 12th, Haymakers, Troy; Tuesday, 13th, Lowells, Boston; Wednesday, 14th, Boston Club, Boston; Thursday, 15th, Harvards, Boston; Saturday, 17th, Eckfords, Brooklyn; Monday, 19th, Mutuals, Brooklyn; Tuesday, 20th, Atlantics, Brooklyn; Wednesday, 21st, Resolutes, Elizabeth, N. J.; Thursday, 22d, Experts, of Philadelphia; Saturday, the 24th, Athletics, of Philadelphia; Monday, 26th, Olympics (Professional), Washington; Tuesday, 27th, Nationals, Washington; Wednesday, 28th, Olympics (Amateur nine), Washington; Thursday, 29th, Olympics, Baltimore; Saturday, July 1st, Pittsburgh, Pa.

THE GRAMERCY CLUB.—This first-class amateur club has been organized for 1871 with the following nine:—Van Aist, pitcher; Fowler, catcher; Fyffe, first base; Stafford, second base; McDonald, third base; Phelps, short stop and captain; Christy, left field; Rees, centre field; Eugene, right field. The Gramercys will play on the old ball field of the Union Club, of Morrisania, at Melrose, and they will be ready for challenges on April 21st. All communications to be directed to Wm. C. Fresh, 148 East Nineteenth street.

EMPIRES, OF THE MOUND CITY.—At a regular meeting of the Empire Club, of St. Louis, the following office were elected for the ensuing year:—H. Clay Sexton, president; W. S. Parr, vice president; C. H. Stevens, secretary; H. G. D. Barklage, treasurer; J. J. Spaulding and W. D. Gorman, field captains; directors, H. C. Sexton, H. G. D. Barklage, J. W. O'Connell, W. S. Parr, J. J. Spaulding, T. H. Furth, C. H. Stevens, W. D. Gorman and J. H. Farrar. Address all communications to C. H. Stevens, P. O. Box 2,538.

THE FABER CLUB, OF CHICAGO.—This press club, of Chicago, had a meeting on April 13th and elected officials as follows:—T. Z. Camles, president; A. Bodkin, vice president; Charles Reed, treasurer, and John English and Joe Pangborn, directors, including "Truthful James." The club nine are:—Martin, catcher; Pangborn, pitcher; English, fleeing and Morrison on the bases; McAvoy, left field; Wheeler at centre field and Larkin at right field, with "Truthful James" as short stop.

PLAY IN NEW ORLEANS.—The Mutuals beat the Magnolias by account of 16 on the 18th inst., upon which day the Orleans club waxed the Empires by a score of 27 to 21, and the Baltics polished off the Dots, after a fine game, by the following score:

pany most excellent business has been done. Monday night, the 24th, the Lauri Family of Pantomimists will appear; also the Wahallas."

DRAMATIC INFORMATION from Chicago, Ill., to the following effect, has been remitted us by our regular correspondent, dated April 21st:—"Theatrical business in the Garden City has been very bad the past two weeks, and from present indications it will remain so the balance of the season. Manager Aiken has proven himself one of the most energetic managers during the past season, and has brought out nearly every new piece that had gained a popularity in this or the old country—always producing the same in a faultless manner, both in acting and scenic effects—but unfortunately without profit, and at last has been compelled to give up the ship for lack of means. The present season will be brought to a close on the 29th. Mr. Frank Drew opened in the 'Irish Emigrant' and 'Acting Mad' on Monday evening, April 17th, to a light house. 'Rory O'More' and 'Too Much for Good Nature' constituted the bill last evening and will remain the reards the rest of the week. Next week will be fully devoted to benefits. On the 1st of May Mrs. Allen takes out a company for the summer season, opening in Oshkosh, Wis. .....Mr. Richard Ralph, the latest aspirant for dramatic fame, opened at McVicker's Theatre, in John Brougham's production called the 'Minstrel Boy,' on the 17th, and is mightily appearing to small audiences. The play is complete in three acts and abounds in rapid changes, fortunes and misfortunes, giving full scope for the actor to display his versatility. Taken as a whole, however, the play is not one of Mr. Brougham's best. Of Mr. Ralph's acting, candor compels us to say that it is queer, and the sooner he dons the burnt cork the better it will be for him. Mr. Wheelock, Mr. Bock, Mrs. Myers and Mrs Keene made the making as much out of the characters as possible. John E. Owens opens on the 24th."

A JUVENILE LADY, a first old woman, heavy man and walking gentleman are wanted by W. Cooke Pope, who advertises.

MISS FANNY E. PRICE performed during the past week in Terre Haute, Ind.

JOSEPH HAWORTH opened at the Holliday Street Theatre, Baltimore, Md., on Monday, the 17th, in an engagement of one week. "Rip Van Winkle" was the bill throughout the entire week, including a Saturday matinee. Our correspondent, under date of April 22d, says:—"The same eager desire to witness this legendary production of Irving and Bouccicault, and the same overflowing audiences as heretofore, have marked the present engagement of Mr. Jefferson. Miss Isabella Cameron sustained the role of Dame Van Winkle most creditably. Messrs. Anderson and Howard delineated the characters of Derrick Von Beekman and Cockles, Fortescue that of Nicholas Vedder. Miss Maggie Glenn enacted the part of Little Meenie and Master Harry Jackson, his first appearance, that of Little Hendrick. Messrs. Hawkins and Burton appeared as Stein and Hendrick Hudson, Harry Hudson as Hendrick Vedder; in the first act, an' Miss Minnie Plunkett as Meenie. Unusual preparations are being made for the production of the 'Black Crook' in May. The scenic embellishments by Chas. S. Getz, son and nephew, now progressing at their studies in the theatre, will surpass all their former brilliant efforts in this connexion. Mr. George Holland, son of the late comedian, has been engaged by Mr. Ford, of the Holliday, for the season of 1871-2. On Monday, 24th, the versatile comedian, Jos. Murphy, commences an engagement.....On Monday, 17th inst., the following extra attractions were presented to a crowded auditory, at the Front Street Theatre Comique, viz.:—Miss Sallie Mason in her musical gems; J. H. Milburn in his vocal entertainment; Mr. C. A. Booth, velocipedist, and the Crack Demon Ballet, in the dance by the Misses Bettie and Sophie Remmersberg, and the corvphees and ballet of the Front. The favorites, Bowman and Harris, in their Ethiopian changes, etc., still remain. Harrigan and Hart and Jas. S. Edwards, also in darkey delineations, are immensely popular. Sam Devere, the leading ebony humorist of this establishment, had a benefit on Tuesday, the 18th, which proved a pleasure as well as excruciating. A silver goblet was awarded for the best conundrum. Milburn in his character delineations, especially of the tender sex, has created a perfect furore. Miss Mason in her vocalisms and Booth upon the velocipede are invariably encored. On Monday next, Miss Maggie Desmond, vocalist; the Comical Dwarfs and a new ballet appear. On the Wednesday, 26th, benefit of 'Uncle Ben of the Eastern Shore.'"

THE NEW OPERA HOUSE, Rochester, N. Y., is announced to be opened on May 10th, under the management of Thomas Carr. The English Opera Combination will be the opening attraction, and after their engagement dramatic performances will be given. The following is the list of the company said to be engaged:—Ben Rogers, stage manager and low comedian; George Martin, heavy man; J. Clinton Hall, leading man; F. Martin, juveniles; Ed. Clifford, second heavy man; A. Gregory, second low comedian; T. Archer, old man; Coleman, second old man; Chas. A. Reinhart, Henry Evans and J. Rearson, utility; T. V. Jones, prompter; Miss Henrietta Osburn, leading lady; Miss Alice Brooks, soubrette; Miss May Montelis, comedienne; Miss Harting, walking lady; Mrs. C. A. Underhill Perry, old woman, with a full and efficient corps de ballet.

CONCERNING AMUSEMENTS IN SACRAMENTO, Cal., our correspondent sends us the following budget, dated April 16th:—"The engagement of Miss Leo Hudson at the Metropolitan Theatre closed last Saturday night with a farewell benefit. The plays presented were 'Mazeppa' and 'Jack Sheppard' on both of which nights Miss Leo Hudson appeared. A fair audience was in attendance, and Black Bess carried off the honors.....On Monday last the celebrated tragedian, Daniel E. Bandmann, and his wife, late Miss Milly Palmer, from the English theatres, began a limited engagement of four nights, opening in Mr. Bandmann's specialty of 'Narcisse,' followed on Tuesday night by 'Othello.' On Wednesday 'The Robbers' was announced, but in consequence of the sudden sickness of Miss Sue Robinson, who was cast for Amelia, 'Narcisse' was substituted. Thursday night was devoted to the farewell benefit of the Bandmanns, when 'Romeo and Juliet' was performed, John McCullough, of the California Theatre, S. F., who had kindly volunteered his services, appearing as Romeo, Mrs. Bandmann as Juliet, and Mr. Bandmann as Mercutio. The business during the Bandmann engagement was not very good, and certainly the performances of Mr. Bandmann did not help to bring it up. Mrs. Bandmann's Juliet was exceedingly good, the audience present on the occasion of the benefit—and a fair house by the way, was large—testifying their approbation by continued calls before the curtain. Mr. McCullough was the recipient of a like compliment, and deservedly so, for the gentleman performed with great zeal and earnestness..... Last night, Friday, the Metropolitan was occupied by Prof. Hagar's historical allegory and tableaux, entitled 'The Great Republic.' The characters were all represented by the children of the public schools, to the number of one hundred and fifty, the performance being given for the benefit of the Howard Benevolent Society. There was not much of an audience last night, and, as I remarked in my last communication, I opine that the party that will be most benefited by the entertainment will be Prof. Hagar himself. The show will be repeated for the matinee this afternoon, and in the evening.....On this evening, the 17th inst., the charming Zavistowski Sisters begin an engagement, under Manager Proctor, prior to their departure for Australia. Their opening bill will be their version of the great burlesque, 'Ixion,' and the comedy of 'Faint Heart Never Won Fair Lady,' in which Miss Alice appears as King Charles. The advent of the Sisters is looked forward to with much interest, as they are great favorites here.....Matters theatrical in Virginia City, Nevada, have been fair. At Piper's Opera House the Nathan Troupe of Juveniles have been playing in Irish farces and specialties. Their engagement closes to-night, and on Monday John T. Raymond, the popular comedian of the California Theatre, commences a season of one week, opening in 'Our American Cousin.' Manager Piper is negotiating for the appearance of Daniel E. Bandmann and his wife.....McKee Rankin, Kitty Blanchard and John Powers were, at last accounts, in Greeley, Colorado, doing well.....Miss Annette Ince and her sister are playing at the Denver City Theatre, under the management of J. Langrishe, to splendid business.....The Carter Dramatic Combination have been playing to good business in the new Merced Theatre, Los Angeles. Their performances are said to satisfy the tastes of the residents in that vicinity, though by no means are the same artistic..... Tha Galete Troupe of Specialties are among the things that were, having dissolved at the close of their interior trip last Monday.....The Romelli troupe of gymnasts have been engaged by Lee, the circus manager, and will exhibit the coming season under canvas.....The Sylvester and Miss Schott are to cash from San Francisco on a professional visit to Los Angelos to-morrow, and Marie Gaugain and Millie Young are to join the ballet at the Metropolitan Theatre, San Francisco.....The Proctor dramatic company performed in Stockton last night; 'Aprs A Figure' is the bill to-night. To-night 'The Long Strike' is announced. The company returns here on Monday, to support the Zavistowski Sisters.....'Fritz'—J. K. Emmett, who is to appear at the California Theatre on Monday next—passed through here to-day, en route for the Bay City, accompanied by his wife and child. Johnny Manning, Marie Zoel, Aline La Favre and sister, variety performers, engaged by Mr. Snow, of the Bella Union, San Francisco, were also passengers on the same train.—Alpha."

SAMUEL B. FOWLER, a stage carpenter, employed at the Holliday Street Theatre, Baltimore, Md., died in that city April 16th, aged 26 years. His death was the result of an accident, which occurred after the close of the matinee performance on April 16th. He fell from the "flies" to the stage, a distance of some thirty feet, and struck upon a chair during his fall, fracturing his skull. He lingered until half past two o'clock on the following morning, the exertions of the most distinguished physicians in the city being unable to preserve his life.

CARLEHART & CO.'S DRAMATIC COMPANY failed to appear in Springfield, Ill., on April 17th, as announced.

THE GILBERT SISTERS' DRAMATIC TROUPE closed an engagement of eight nights in Tuscaloosa, Ala., on April 18th.

THE IRENE WORRELL burlesque troupe disbanded in Dayton, O., on April 19th.

C. W. COULDOCK and his daughter Eliza closed an engagement in Sioux City, Mo., on April 17th, and it is said they intended coming East.

JOHN L. HALL'S BURLESQUE TROUPE performed in Taunton, Mass., on April 22d, and was announced to remain the 24th.

H. G. CLARKE'S DRAMATIC COMPANY is billed, with Mrs. G. C. Howard as the star, to play in Providence, R. I., on the 24th; New Bedford, 25th; Taunton, 26th; Worcester, 27th; Springfield, 28th, and Hartford, 29th. The following week Mr. Clarke takes out Oliver Doud Byron for a few weeks' tour.

MISS LUCILLE WESTERN commences a tour of the neighboring cities, under the management of Messrs. Lowell & Simmonds, this evening, April 24th, at Elmira, N. Y.; thence to Rochester, 25th and 26th; Syracuse, 27th, 28th, and 29th.

MISS JEAN HOSMER is billed to commence an engagement in Toronto, Ont., on April 24th.

MLLE. ZOE, who closed her traveling season at Trenton, N. J., on April 15th, was the recipient on that evening of a highly complimentary letter, signed by every member of her company, including the orchestra, which will be found published in full in our advertising columns. She will pass the summer at her country seat at Hempstead, L. I., where all letters should be addressed as per advertisement. For her coming fall and winter season she has secured the opera houses in five of the principal towns in Pennsylvania where state or county fairs will be held.

MISS MARIETTA RAVEL met with so much success during her engagement at the theatre in Salt Lake City, Utah Ter., that she was re-engaged for the week ending April 22d.

FRANK ROCHE is said to be engaged as leading man at Mrs. Conway's new theatre, Brooklyn, L. I., for the coming season.

LAURA KEENE is billed to play in Bridgeport, Conn., April 24th and 25th.

HERNDON'S DRAMATIC COMPANY played in New Berlin, N. Y., a brief engagement ending on April 20th, and was billed to commence a brief season at Oxford on April 24th.

THE "OLD RELIABLE THEATRE" is the title assumed by a dramatic company which closed a two weeks' season in Maysville, Ky., April 17th, and is billed to open in Portsmouth on May 1st. The following is a list of the company:—J. G. Stultz, G. Bryant, C. S. Beverly, H. C. Nagy, G. H. Caulfield, G. Thompson, W. King, Frank Pajoto, Nick Faloto, Z. Roxy, Hesen D'Este, Zoe Izola, Cecile Vetore, Nettie Adams and Miss Fannie.

MISS MAGGIE MITCHELL played in Hartford, Conn., April 17th and 18th; Waterbury, 19th; Ansonia, 20th; and closed her tour at Bridgeport with the performances of the 21st and 22d.

MISS CARRIE CARWIN is dangerously ill at Little Falls, but in what state our correspondent neglects to state.

PLUNKETT'S DRAMATIC COMPANY performed in Ft. Madison, Ind., three nights, commencing April 17th.

THE SEASON at Coates' Opera House, Kansas City, Mo., closed on April 22d.

THE ACADEMY OF MUSIC, Omaha, Nebraska, is advertised to open April 24th, with Edwin Adams as the star, and the following dramatic company:—Miss Alice Grey, Mrs. Frank Murdock, Miss Nellie Taylor, Mrs. De Bar, Miss Carlotta, Miss F. Estcuse, Miss Minnie, Mr. Frank Murdock, Harry Everett, W. D. Shiels, George Gaston, E. F. Clark, H. A. Hales, Walter James, Gus Adams and J. A. Stevens.

THE CHAPMAN SISTERS are billed to perform in Albany, Ga., April 24th, 25th and 26th.

"NOT GUILTY," by Harry Leslie, was performed at the Park Theatre, Brooklyn, during the past week, bringing Mr. and Mrs. Conway before their friends again. The part of "John Forbes" was admirably performed by Mr. Conway, and the character of Jane, his wife, found a fitting representative in Mrs. Conway. A feature of the performances was the intelligent acting of little Lillie Conway as Jane's niece, and the villain of the play was admirably represented by Mr. Carroll. Mr. Chippendale, too, had a part exactly suited to him, and Lamb was assigned the comic feature. On Tuesday Mr. Carroll had a full house at his benefit, and to-day Mr. Bates on Friday. On April 24th Mr. Chippendale takes a benefit, when "Colleen Bawn" and "Sketches in India," are to be presented. On April 26th Mr. Lamb's benefit comes off, when he is to appear as Paul Pry.

J. F. SHERRY'S NEW YORK THEATRICAL COMPANY is announced to perform in Meadville, Pa., May 27th, 29th and 30th.

J. W. LANERGAN is to commence his usual summer season in St. John, N. B., on May 24th. Among the leading members of the company already engaged are Miss Kate Denin, John Wilson and Walter Leanox.

MARIAN TAYLOR, burlesque artist and comedienne, can be engaged through her agent, Col. T. A. Brown.

A YOUNG MAN advertises for an engagement to do general business.

BUSINESS AT THE ACADEMY OF MUSIC, Cleveland, O., during the current (past) week has been fair, writes our correspondent. "On the 17th Miss Katie Putnam made her first appearance in Cleveland, appearing as Little Nell and The Marchioness, in a dramatization of Dickens' 'Old Curiosity Shop.' The version is a different one to the one played by Lotta, and took well. Miss Putnam is a bright, clever actress, and made a hit. Mr. Edwin Browne, who travels with her, played Swvelier. J. J. Wallace's make up and acting of Quilp was excellent. John Collins as Grandfather Trent, Martin Golden as Sampson, Brass and Wilis Brong as Sally Brass were also very good. On the 19th, 'Female Detective'; 20th, 'Little Treasure' and 'Stage Struck'; 21st and 22d 'Sans Souci.' A very pleasing portion of the week's entertainments has been the appearance of 'Dot,' a little midget of about three years, who did a song and dance each evening in wonderful style for her age. Next week Mrs. Oates' Burlesque Company will be the attraction, the stock company going to Detroit during the Oates' engagement."

THE THEATRES IN ALBANY, N. Y., have not done an immense business the past week, says our correspondent writing on April 22d:—"Mr. E. L. Mallack, the tragedian, opened at the Trimble Opera House on the 17th, in McCloskey's new drama of 'Through by Daylight.' The drama is, with one or two exceptions, well written, and contains many interesting scenes, startling incidents and exciting situations. The part of George Glenroy, the hero, however, should be re-written. Mr. Mallack impersonated the hero, George Glenroy, with great force, and has shown that he will one day make his mark in the profession he has chosen. Mr. Keeble as Arthur Comstock was in every way excellent. Mr. Street's Rufus Appleton was satisfactorily rendered. The Archy White of John Webster was capital. Miss Rand gave a faithful portrayal of Edith Comstock. Miss Parker's Madge Morton and Miss Young's Mrs. Corrigan were praiseworthy. Rip Tearing Johnny of J. P. Stoner, Mickey Corrigan of Neil Gray, and Jenny Larkin of Mrs. Stoddard, were commendable. The piece was put on with considerable new scenery, which was very fine, especially the scene in front of the Trimble Opera House. Mr. C. Loveday retires from the stock this evening (23d). Miss Rose Rand is the recipient of a benefit on the 26th, when she will appear as Marie in the 'Pearl of Savoy.' The opening of the 27th is set apart for the benefit of W. L. Street, when the comedy of 'All that Glitters' and burlesque of 'Pocahontas' will be the bill On the 28th the orchestra will take a benefit; a couple of farces will be played and a grand concert be given by the orchestra. Ticket night is set down for the 29th. 'Dick Turpin and Tom King' and 'Robert Macaire' are to be enacted. On May 1st the 'Three Hunchbacks' will commence an engagement at this establishment. Messrs. C. K. and W. L. Haskell, the gentlemanly business manager and treasurer of this house, respectively received a benefit this evening and had a full house. The Haskell Brothers, by their obliging manners, have won hosts of friends the past season.....Mrs. C. A. Underhill's season of five nights commenced on the 18th at Martin Hall. The play produced was 'Camille.' Mrs. Watkins as Camille gave a finished impersonation of that character. Mr. Frank Roche was the Armand Duval. The other characters were admirably sustained by Messrs. W. H. Hamblin, G. C. Davenport, S. C. Knapp, J. R. Grismer, the Misses Rose Johns, Florence Bradley, Mahon, and Mrs. Philips. 'Camille' was repeated for a matinee on the 19th. 'Jezebel' was produced on the 19th. The cast of characters was unexceptionably good. Mrs. Watkins did justice to the character of Mme. D'Artigues. Frank Roche's George D'Artigues was in every way in keeping with his reputation. Mr. Knapp's Capt. Bretimer, Mr. Grismer's Count de Hambitz as Prima and Mr. Davenport as Cristol were very fine. The Alfred Ravell of G. W. Harrison and Cotteran of G. P. Grismer were good. Miss Florence Noble, as Margaret Breitman, acquitted herself in a handsome manner. Miss Mahon and Miss Effie Johns were very careful and conscientious as Gertrude and Lucille. The grand complimentary benefit tendered by the Governor and Legislature to the fire department citizens came off on the 20th and was largely attended. The bill presented was 'Jezebel' and 'Katharine and Petruchio.' On the 21st 'Jezebel' and 'Irish Assurance and Yankee Modesty,' with G. C. Davenport as Pat and Effie Johns as Nancy composed the bill. This evening, 22d, for the benefit of Frank Roche, 'Jezebel' and 'The Honeymoon.'"

F. J. WILDMAN, with a small dramatic company, is playing at Key West, Fla., and in May will play one week in Havana.

THE CHESTNUT STREET THEATRE, Philadelphia, has presented a series of benefit bills during the past week, Mr. W. S. Fredericks, the stage manager, Equity Lodge K. of P., and Mrs. E. Edwards Lewis, the author of "The Marquis," being the successive beneficiaires. "The Two Friends," "Married Life," "The Serious Family," "Damon and Pythias," "The Wife," "Othello" and "School" have been among the attractions presented. Mr. Edmund Coles, an American actor, who has recently been playing at the Princess' Theatre, London, Eng., made his re-appearance in America on the evening of the 17th, as Henry Dove in "Married Life" and created quite a favorable impression. He has been engaged for the present season and may prove a valuable acquisition to the company. The present week will be set apart for benefits, Mr. Jorchiania having one on the 29th inst. "Saratoga" is underlined and will be produced at an early date.

A SCARRON in masks, as they are called, is to take place, at the Academy of Music, on Thursday evening, April 20th, during the performance of the "Black Crook," which created quite an excitement in the auditorium. It appears that a married man—whom we shall call John Smith, for short, although that is not his name—having left his wife at home, engaged in mending stockings or nursing the baby, thought it was a good chance to have a little sport, so he went after a young girl with whom he was deeply in love, and took her with him to see the anatomical and other beauties of the "Black Crook." At every pose of the dancers, every display made by the scantily-attired Markham, John Smith gave his companion a loving nudge, and pressed himself as close to her as circumstances would permit, and Smithy had never enjoyed anything half as much as being in a crowd with a girl's society. But the wife, who was, like Cæsar's wife, above suspicion herself, had her pious doubts concerning her husband's devotion and propriety, so she saw enough to convince her that her Smithy was playing her false; dropping her stockings or baby, it doesn't matter which, she took counsel with her brother, and these two determined that they, too, would see the "Black Crook;" to this end they entered the Academy and took their seats. The husband, oblivious to everything else but the angel by his side, was in a delirium of bliss, and doubtless wondered if any other man had ever "been there" but himself. Suddenly, in his great joy, Smithy happened to turn his head, and there, in full view, was his "only wedded wife" gazing intently upon him and his companion. The day to grave is a momentary transition, and Smithy, reading "the situation," got skeered, as it were, and sought to leave without taking his silent partner with him. As he was going along the aisle, the wife cried out in a loud tone of voice, "Don't you go away from here, John Smith; you'd better stop with that girl a little longer; I won't hurt you, Smith." The audience enjoyed the scene hugely, and amid the laughter and commotion John Smith got out of the house; the girl soon after followed. What transpired when wifey caught John at home has not yet transpired.

J. W. CARROLL, the popular actor now playing at the Park Theatre, Brooklyn, L. I., and J. J. McCloskey, the sensational dramatist, have leased the Park Theatre for the coming dramatic season of 1871-2. It will be the intention of the management to produce sensational plays.

MRS. JENNIE CARROLL, a favorite actress with the Brooklyn, L. I., public, is announced to take a benefit at the Park Theatre, Brooklyn, April 28th, when the "Octoroon" will be acted. She has labored conscientiously during the season, and we trust she will be rewarded with a crowded auditorium.

F. W. WILLIAMS, now at the Boston Museum, Boston, Mass., will succeed T. A. Hall as the stage manager at the Holliday Street Theatre, Baltimore, Md., next season.

JOHN T. FORD'S NEW OPERA HOUSE in Baltimore, Md., is progressing rapidly. The foundation is completely laid and the lower story is in course of erection. In excavating the cellar fifteen thousand cart loads of dirt were removed.

"NECK AND NECK" was brought out at the Academy of Music, Buffalo, N. Y., on the 18th inst., in which Mr. E. T. Stetson (in 1863 the leading man of the Academy company) appeared in the principal role of Walter Wilmarth. The piece abounds, says our correspondent, "with scenes in thrilling situations and tableaux. The execution and railway scenes were especially well portrayed. Mr. Stetson, as the Hero, was highly applauded. He possesses a commanding figure and a fine voice, and his reading is excellent. His delivery in the execution scene, and during the denunciation of Denman, was strikingly thrilling and impressive. The piece was presented with the full strength of the company, including the following cast:—Walter Wilmarth, Mr. E. T. Stetson; Carrie Freeland, Miss Langley; Jenny, Miss Thompson; Mrs. Boliver, Mrs. Hodges; Fanny Boliver, Miss Wood; Fey, the Witch, Miss Jones; Mrs. Farnsworth, Miss Morris; Jim Johnson, Mr. Halford; Sir Richard Freeland, Mr. Haviland; Carroll Denman, Mr. Hastings; Franklin, Mr. Hodges; Pumpkin, Jr., Mr. Rogers; Adolphus Darling, Mr. Southard. Aside from some minor defects, the piece was produced faultlessly. It drew full houses nightly, and at Mr. Stetson's benefit, last evening, a large audience attested their appreciation of its merits. The play, although not possessing many literary points, is a first-class sensational drama, and merits the success it receives. This afternoon and evening will witness its final representations. On Monday evening, April 24th, the gentlemanly stage manager, Mr. Ben. G. Rogers, receives his annual benefit. The drama of "Blow for Blow" and the farce of "Irish Pepper vs. Dutch Mustard" will be produced, the beneficiary assuming the chief characters in each piece. Mr. Frank Mayo will fill up the balance of the week.

ELLA BURNS, tragedienne and vocalist, now playing at the Walnut Street Theatre, Philadelphia, advertises that she is prepared to negotiate with managers for engagements.

Musical.

FRED. BAKER, leader of orchestra, advertises that he can be engaged.

SAM WELKER'S GIFT SHOW was at New Lisbon, O., the past week, where it is reported to have done a good business. It will be at Niles, Mich., three days this week and at Warren, O., next week.

A GENTLEMAN advertises that he would like to meet with a professional who could give him dramatic training.

STEEL & CO., bill posters, Reading, Pa., publish cards in another column, to which we refer the profession.

PROF. J. H. GOODALL, solo violinist and vocalist, is at present traveling with Dr. C. L. Dunham's Medical Concert Troupe through New York state, and is said to be meeting with success. He can be addressed care of this office.

THE FRENCH OPERA COMPANY in New Orleans, La., had a successful week, ending Sunday, April 16th. On the 10th, Grisar's opera, "Les Amour du Diable," was produced for the benefit of Mme Nadelle. On Tuesday, the 11th, Meyerbeer's grand opera, "Robert le Diable," was produced in good style, Mr. Castelmary making a great hit as Bertram. On Thursday, the 13th, "Les Amours du Diable" was repeated in fair style, showing many signs of improvement. At the Saturday matinee Verdi's magnificent opera of "Jerusalem" was sung, with Bazin's amusing opera, "Le Voyage en Chine," repeated in the evening. On Sunday evening, Auber's grand opera, "La Muette de Portici," was rendered in admirable style, with Messrs. Dumestre and Cazaux in their respective roles. So wrote "Crescent," on April 17th.

MESSRS. SCHARLICK AND H. VARNELL, managers of the American Comic Opera Troupe, were the recipients of a testimonial at Wieting Opera House, Syracuse, N. Y., on April 15th, when a large and appreciative audience was present. The bill consisted of two scenes from "Il Trovatore" and Julius Eichberg's "Doctor of Alcantara." The whole performance passed off very smoothly indeed. Mr. Frank Rorsback made a decided hit in both pieces and was loudly called before the curtain. Miss Marion Taylor and Miss Nellie E. Knapp also received a good share of the honors for their capital acting and fine vocalization. The company next appears at Trimble Opera House, Albany. So wrote our correspondent, "Cisum."

JOSEPH RAMPONE, clarionet and basso soloist and tenor horn player, late of Kelly and Leon's Minstrels, advertises that he can be engaged.

JOHN DENIER wants a leader of orchestra for his Gaiete Comique Troupe. His address is in another column.

THE RESCUING FARRISBURG, Syria bell-ringers, are billed to perform in Kansas City, Mo., for a brief season, commencing April 24th.

THE MENDELSSOHN QUINTETTE CLUB performed in Quincy, Ill., April 17th.

THE ARION MUSICAL SOCIETY of Quincy, Ill., composed of local talent, is announced to give a concert in that city on April 24th.

THE GRAND ENGLISH OPERA COMBINATION is billed to perform in Akron, Ohio, April 27th; Meadville, Pa., May 1st.

MISS VIENNA DEMOREST, assisted by M'lle Tedesca, J. R. Thomas and Signor Carlo Mora, gave a concert in Bridgeport, Conn., April 18th, and Hartford 19th.

THE CONTINENTAL VOCALISTS performed in Decatur, Mich., April 21st, and 22d, and are billed ahead as follows:—Niles, 26th and 27th; New Buffalo, 28th and 29th; and Michigan City, May 1st.

MRS. IMOGENE BROWN gave two concerts in Peoria, Ill., April 19th and 20th, assisted by A. Bernard Furlong, tenor; F. A. Borrell, basso; N. Ladochowski, pianist, and N. Levant, director.

THE GRAND ENGLISH OPERA TROUPE remained three nights of last week at Mozart Hall, Cincinnati, O., playing to very good houses throughout their whole stay, according to our correspondent, who writes on April 21st:—"On Monday of this (their second) week, they gave Von Weber's 'Oberon,' with Miss Howson as Reiza, Mrs. Seguin as Fatima, Miss Goodwin as Puck, and Mr. Castle as Sir Huon. Tuesday, Mr. Bowler had a benefit, according to the usual programme, appearing as Violo, in the sparkling drama of that name, supported by Campbell as Beppo, Drayton as Giacomo, Rose Hersee as Zerilna, and Mrs. Bowler as Lady Allcash. Mr. Drayton introduced into his part Shield's scene 'The Wolf,' and Mr. Campbell also sandwiched in a foreign song—'Let All Obey.' 'Martha' was the concluding opera on Wednesday evening, Mrs. Bernard as Martha, Mrs. Seguin as Nancy, Castle as Lionel, and Campbell as Plunkett. All four characters were capitally sung and acted, save that at times there were too many pauses in the dialogue, intended to be effective, but calculated rather to be wearisome. The company is more successful in light than heavy operas, and they should have a few more of the former in their repertoire. They went hence to Louisville, are to return here for one day, Wednesday, 26th, giving the 'Bohemian Girl' for a matinee performance and 'Robert Le Diable' in the evening.

Variety Halls.

CHAS. WEBSTER, Irish, Dutch and general comedian, at present traveling with the Wallace Sisters, will shortly be disengaged. His address is in another column.

AT THE WALNUT STREET THEATRE, Kansas City, Mo., ever since the Polly Daly Blonde Minstrels have been there, crowded houses have greeted them. Their singing is admirable and wardrobe elegant. Miss Polly is adding nightly to her laurels; everything entrusted to her is rendered in the best style. The new faces this week are Ada Rehael, Celia Ford, and Josie Wilson. Next week will bring changes, who was greeted with immense applause. Gilfoil and Rouke have had no equals in this city in their double clog and songs and dances. The Bohemian polka, by M'lle Idalie and Miss Polly, is very well executed. Allen and Wilson's burlesque of the same is immense, bringing down the house each evening. They also appeared in the "Two Bandits," which was given in good style. O. W. Blake's "Turn Him Out" is one of the best farces ever produced, and is performed by him in a manner that cannot be surpassed. "Toodles" and the "Poacher's Doom" concluded the evening's entertainment, which were well produced, with G. W. Malmburg, Thad. Varney, Miss Morton and others in the cast. So wrote our correspondent on April 21st.

TALENT is wanted for Smith's Opera House, East Saginaw, Mich. Address as per advertisement.

AT THE METROPOLITAN, Indianapolis, Ind., the principal attractions have been Oscar Wild in his celebrated songs, Miss Augusta Lamereaux in her Lingard changes, and Johnnie McVeigh's stump orations. Next (this) week James Vincent and Hattie O'Neil, late of the Weber Burlesque Troupe, open here for three weeks. This theatre, under the management of Mr. Fred Thompson, is rapidly becoming one of the leading variety halls. So writes our correspondent, under date of April 21st.

DAN SHELBY opens his Variety Theatre, Buffalo, N. Y., on April 29th. The house has been thoroughly repaired, the auditorium remodeled, new scenery and properties provided and a full and efficient company engaged. Mr. Shelby proposes to present all the popular variety stars in rapid succession.

Negro Minstrelsy.

HOOLEY'S MINSTRELS, says our Chicago, Ill., correspondent, writing on April 21st, "are doing a huge business, with 'Cinderella' as the special attraction. This burlesque was presented for the first time, after many weeks' preparation, on the 17th, to a crowded house. It has been handsomely mounted, the scenery is elegant and is gotten up in Mr. Halley's very best style. The costumes are all new and gorgeous in the extreme. The original music is finely rendered by the efficient orchestra, and the singing of Brandini, Basquin, Nichols and Eugene is of a superior order. Among the many novelties presented in the piece are the fountain of real water, with brilliantly sparkling illuminated sprays of gold, silver and crimson hues; the tournament scene, introducing a ludicrous umbrella Can-can; a Highland fling, by little Dollie Hamilton; triple dance by Johnson, Powers and Campbell; sword combat, by Mullinger and Rice, and the new band music, by Gibler's Juvenile Band, are the most prominent. Judging from the enthusiasm manifested by the audiences, the burlesque is destined to have a long run."

CARNCROSS AND DIXEY'S MINSTRELS open at the National Theatre, Washington, D. C., for a short engagement on the 24th inst.

WITH MANNING'S MINSTRELS, Chicago, Ill., the "Century Plant" is meeting with the same success that attended "The Trip Around the World," the house being crowded nightly. A few important changes have been made, since my last, in the text of the piece, resulting in the freshening up of the dialogue a little, which makes it still more attractive. Ricardo has made a most decided hit, and has become a great favorite. His singing is unsurpassed. Steele Rogers and Little Addie are doing a double clog, which is very neatly executed. J. J. Gallagher sings a new ballad in his pleasing style. Cotton and Manning appear in the act, "Who Stole Dat Banjo?" "Aladdin" is in course of preparation. E. M. Hall closed his engagement on the 15th, and is in St. Louis this week. So writes our correspondent.

SIMMONS AND SLOCUM'S MINSTRELS, Philadelphia, had a large share of the public patronage last week, their entertainment being the only one of the kind at present in that city. E. N. Slocum's burlesque of "Rip Van Winkle," which has crowded the house for the past two weeks, affords fine scope for all the company to show their talent, and the comic efforts of Billy Sweetnam and Lew Simmons, in their respective characters therein, are replete with mirth and good humor. Besides the usual variety of vocal and instrumental music, jokes and witticisms, the Empire Boys appeared in their well-executed songs and dances, and the laughable interludes of "The Wrong Man" and "Unmasked" combined to make up a most enjoyable entertainment. On the 20th inst. Mr. E. N. Slocum was greeted with a large house on the occasion of his benefit. Lew Brimmer made his first appearance there on the 17th, and his banjo solos proved an attractive feature. "Rip Van Winkle," after a successful run of two weeks, gives place to Robert Fraser's successful pantomime of "Jack and Gill. Lew Simmons, the popular comedian, will have a benefit on the 27th inst., when a most attractive programme will be presented.

CARNCROSS AND DIXEY'S MINSTRELS closed their season at the Eleventh Street Opera House, Philadelphia, on the 18th inst.

WELCH, HUGHES & WHITE'S MINSTRELS are to enter Brooklyn in equestrian style on Wednesday morning, 26th inst., and the same night re-open their Brooklyn Opera House, which has been fitted up handsomely, greatly enlarged and in every way improved, especially in the important matter of ventilation. This will be the only minstrel hall in Brooklyn now, and with three such old favorites and the host of new talent Manager White is to present no doubt the troupe will have a successful season of it. The new house will comfortably accommodate between two and three thousand people. The locality is one of the best in Brooklyn for an establishment of the kind.

LEW BENEDICT, of Duprez and Benedict's, was married at Mansfield, O., on April 17th, to Miss Eva de la Motta, of Philadelphia, Pa. In the evening the brass band attached to that troupe serenaded the happy couple.

THE MORRIS BROTHERS' MINSTRELS are billed to perform in Newark, N. J., April 26th and 27th.

SKIFF AND GAYLORD'S MINSTRELS commenced a two weeks' engagement at the St. Charles Theatre, New Orleans, La., on April 17th.

MME. RENTZ'S FEMALE MINSTRELS performed in New Milford, Conn., April 17th; Barrington, Mass., 18th; Lee, 19th; Pittsfield, 20th, and North Adams, 21st and 22d.

DUPREZ AND BENEDICT'S MINSTRELS performed in Mansfield, O., April 17th: Toledo, 19th; Detroit, Mich., 20th and 21st, and are billed to perform in Jackson, 24th; Kalamazoo, 27th, and Grand Rapids, 28th and 29th.

A TROUPE OF FEMALE MINSTRELS, under the management of DIXON E. WATSON, performed in Taunton, Mass., April 21st.

ATKINS AND KEAN'S MINSTRELS performed in Toronto, Ont., April 22d.

CARNCROSS AND DIXEY'S MINSTRELS played in Baltimore, Md., four nights, commencing April 19th.

CAL WAGNER'S MINSTRELS, under the management of J. H. Haverly, performed in Hamilton, O., April 19th; Covington, Ky., 21st; and are billed to play in Louisville, 24th; Lexington, Ky., 24th, 25th and 26th; Cincinnati, O., 27th, 28th and 29th.

THE SAN FRANCISCO MINSTRELS are billed to perform in Buffalo, N. Y., April 26th, 26th and 27th; Erie, Pa., 28th; Titusville, May 1st and 2d; Meadville, 3d; thence to Cleveland, Columbus, Dayton and Cincinnati.

LEW JOHNSON'S PLANTATION MINSTRELS performed in Keokuk, Iowa, April 22d.

THE SAN FRANCISCO MINSTRELS are announced to appear at St. James' Hall, Buffalo, N. Y., on April 26th, 27th and 28th. Mr. H. E. Parmelee is advance agent.

Circus.

G. F. THOMPSON, the boss property man of the Commonwealth Circus, died at Liverpool Station, Pa., on April 19th. He was taken on the 15th with fever and ague and sent a boy to the druggist's for a dose of carter tonetic, of which one and a half grains is a dose. The drug clerk sent him some 240 grains, which he took, unaware of the error that had been committed, and was taken with convulsions. Shortly afterwards he rallied and was thought better and went by the cars to
